ICBC Getting Stiff Fight

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The private insurance industry in B.C. appears to be giving the government-owned insurance corporation a run for its money.

Four of the industry leaders among 160 general insurance firms report sales up at least 15 per cent so far this year, and one looks to a possible 25 per cent improvement by the end of 1974.

One of the four, Wawanesa Mutual, reports a staggering 65-70 per cent jump in premium sales value since January, while the Vancouver Island division of Guardian Insurance Co. of Canada says personal property insurance sales — one sector of the general insurance field — are up 60 per cent for the 12 months to June 30.

Their performance raises the question of whether the Insurance Corp. of B.C. can live up to its prediction in April that in the coming year it would have "premium volume in the general insurance business greater than any of its competitors in B.C."

ICBC maintains it has no wish to force the private insurers out of the general indemnity field and will not resort to undercutting rates to obtain a larger share of the market.

A spokesman for the Crown agency said "We believe we are competitive... we don't intend to run a cut-rate operation."

At the same time, he said, ICBC believes itself to be among the top five of general insurers in the province and "growing at about the rate we expected and on track with the general insurance line."

There are no statistics yet available to make an accurate comparison.

ICBC made its first financial report in April, coinciding with the start of the government's fiscal year, and based on operations commencing six months earlier.

In the private insurance sector reports based on the calendar year are made annually to the superintendent of insurance for B.C. There is no statistical function within the industry association represented by the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

Private insurers attribute the rise in business to several factors, among them:

—Departure of some insurance companies from B.C. following ICBC takeover of automobile insurance which had accounted for two-thirds of the total indemnity field.

—Inflation in the real estate industry making for higher revaluations for current policies and renewals.

—Inflation in the construction industry causing higher settlements on claims for property losses.

—Steadily climbing insurance rates to cover generally higher operating costs.

Step-Mom Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — The step-mother of a six-year-old boy who died in hospital was charged Tuesday with non-capital murder. Charged is Cecilia Taylor, 23, of Vancouver.

Michael Takwu Taylor was rushed to hospital late Monday suffering a fractured skull, cigarette burns on his back and multiple bruises. He died about 12 hours later.

"Waitpersons" soon will be serving food in B.C.'s restaurants.

And the industry isn't too happy about it.

The new Human Rights Code will be proclaimed shortly and prohibits any sexual discrimination in job advertisements.

For restaurant owners the new legislation will mean no more job ads for waitresses or waiters.

FLEEING ROBBER SHOOTS PURSUER

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — A young gunman shot and seriously wounded a pursuer after robbing a Vancouver variety store Tuesday, and escaped by hijacking a mobile camper at gunpoint.

The violence unfolded in front of pedestrians and motorists along the busy 100 block of East Broadway when the blonde-haired holdup man tried to make his getaway.

Raymond Reid, 53, of Vancouver, was shot once in the abdomen at close range as he closed in on the gunman outside a stationery store.

Woolworth's security movie camera was trained on the cash register, only 15 feet from the holdup man, when the robbery took place.

Reid, who owns a florist shop less than a block from where he was shot, was reported in fair condition Tuesday night following surgery at Vancouver General Hospital.

The drama began when a man in his mid-20s walked into the F. W. Woolworth store at 2409 Main, dumped a mirror out of a cardboard box and ordered cashier Debbie Fong to fill the box with money.

With a long-barrelled revolver pointed at her, she gave him about $200 from the register and a stack of larger bills kept under the tray.

The man then ran south on Main with Reid in pursuit, turned west on Broadway, literally running into John Wallden and his two sons from Prince Rupert.

"The boys got tangled up in the chase," said Wallden, a 44-year-old apartment-building landlord visiting relatives in the city.

"The next thing I knew, the tall fell with a revolver and shot the other guy in the stomach. Everybody was just standing around flabbergasted."

After shooting Reid, the gunman commandeered the camper, forcing the driver to chauffeur him through the downtown traffic.

Several blocks after the drive began, the gunman jumped from the camper and disappeared down a side street.

STILL GOING STRONG after 61 years afloat, the 101-foot schooner Adventure put in at the Inner Harbor this week. A regular visitor to Victoria, the Adventure had 28 girl scouts from Oregon on board, enjoying an eight-day cruise out of Seattle. They were given the cruise by Youth Adventure of Washington after a course in small boat handling under sail.

Team Facing Ban For Ferry Party

At least one member of an amateur lacrosse team from Nanaimo may be prosecuted and the entire team banned from using B.C. ferries after a rowdy party aboard the Queen of Burnaby.

The incident occurred Friday when two busloads of fans and the Nanaimo Labatts were returning to Nanaimo after the team had lost 9-7 to the New Westminster Rebels in its last game of the season.

Team manager Dave Weighill said the 25 members and some fans decided to "whoop it up". There was a lot of noise, beer was spilled. Some of the merry-makers decided to have a water fight with fire extinguishers.

"If it can be proven that fire extinguishers were used," David Price, ferry official, said today, "We will not hesitate to take action."

"That is a federal offence. We would prosecute the individuals involved and we would not hesitate to ban the team from using the ferry service."

Price said the RCMP had been called to investigate a "wild party" when an Esquimalt team was travelling aboard the Queen of Esquimalt Aug. 11 and a Victoria team had been banned "two or three years ago".

Contacted in Nanaimo, Weighill confirmed that fire extinguishers had been used. He said he had taken one away from one of the team members but wasn't able to get another extinguisher being used by another merry-maker.

Price said Weighill had taken up a collection aboard the ferry, giving the money to a steward to clean up the mess after the regular cleaning woman had refused.

Departure Bay terminal manager expressed sympathy for Weighill.

Bad Inning Beats City Youngsters

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — One bad inning knocked the Esquimalt-Victoria West team out of title contention today in the eight-team Little League baseball world series.

Red Bluff, Calif., representing the U.S. west zone, scored three times in the fifth inning on two hits and two errors and went on to defeat the Canadian champions 3-0 in a first-round game.

Red Bluff's 250-pound pitcher, 12-year-old righthander Mark Calluci, started the uprising with a one-out single off the centrefield fence and moved to second as Dale Gilbert was safe on an error by second-baseman Mike Bitten.

Both runners moved up on a wild pitch and Calluci scored when Victoria catcher Guyle Cornett missed a tag.

Two more runs scored on a double by Jim Sharpe before Victoria pitcher Mike Bull ended the inning by striking out the next two batters.

Bull allowed five hits and struck out nine batters.

Bellamy saw the new act, along with the existing human rights legislation, for the first time this week.

UN Troops Ignore Order by Turkey

Times News Services

Turkey today ordered UN peacekeeping forces out of the captured port city of Famagusta. Swedish troops posted in the city, however, ignored the order and continued to patrol the deserted streets of the community.

A Turkish soldier, meanwhile, stabbed a Canadian member of the peacekeeping force in Cyprus Tuesday night, the Greek-Cypriot radio reported. Nicosia radio said the Canadian was taken to hospital at the British military base of Dhakelia in serious condition with a knife wound in the abdomen.

The incident took place while the Canadian was investigating reports of looting along the Green Line, which separates the Greek and Turkish sectors of Nicosia, the report added.

The wounding brought to 18 the number of Canadian casualties in Cyprus since the Turkish invasion. One Canadian has been killed.

The Turkish order recalled one of last month for UN forces to get out of the north coast port of Kyrenia. The UN troops refused to leave so the Turks, vastly outnumbering them, simply confined them to their camps.

Then the Turks launched a series of attacks to enlarge their North Coast beachhead.

The UN has whittled away its own presence in other parts of Turkish-controlled Cyprus since the outbreak of the Turkish offensive last week.

Asked to define UN policy on the withdrawal of forces from Turkish-controlled areas, a spokesman said some troops had been pulled out of "operational areas," where heavy fighting was going on.

The force was put on the island 10 years ago to stop small-scale fighting among Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots but has neither the manpower nor the mission to stop the modern army Turkey put on the island a month ago.

Turkish troops, in the village of Aloa wore white surgical masks and used a bulldozer, shovels and then their bare hands to remove the dirt from the rotting bodies in a mass grave. They claimed the victims were Turkish Cypriots massacred by majority Greek residents during last week's battle for northern Cyprus.

"My father, my father," one young man screamed as a body was unearthed. Weeping uncontrollably, he was led away by friends.

In an hour's digging the bodies of two men, two women and two children were unearthed.

"We expect to find at least 40 bodies in there," said a Turkish Cypriot official.

Officials said 65 persons lived in the Turkish Cypriot hamlet, nine miles northwest of Famagusta.

"So far only 10 have been found alive," they said.

On the diplomatic front, leaders of the Greek and Turkish communities in Cyprus have re-established contact amid encouraging signs that the fragile ceasefire is holding.

Informed sources said today that president Glafkos Clerides and Turkish-Cypriot leader Rauf Denkash have spoken to each other by telephone. There was no indication of what they discussed.

In Miami Beach, U.S. Secretary-of-State Henry Kissinger, declaring that "we cannot be the world's policeman," said the United States will not be pressured into any military intervention in Cyprus.

"We will not yield to pressure but we will always listen to reason," Kissinger told an American Legion convention,

HAMILTON

He Just Won't File

Central Saanich Ald. Zach Hamilton has "no intention whatsoever" of listing his assets as required under the new B.C. Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act.

Hamilton said today he was aware he would not be able to run for public office again unless he filled out the papers, "but I couldn't care less," he said.

"I have no intention whatsoever of filing papers for every Tom, Dick and Harry to see as they like."

Hamilton is the first alderman in the Greater Victoria area to declare a firm intention not to file the papers.

Under the new act, elected officials and some senior employees must list all financial assets and companies in which they have an interest. The deadline for filing the papers is Sept. 15.

An official who does not file the required papers is allowed to finish his term of office, but may not run again.

Hamilton's term of office will expire this November.

He said he has nothing against the intent of the act, and would agree to file the papers if they were to be lodged with the attorney-general and anyone wishing to see them had to fill out a form stating why he wanted to see them.

Hamilton said the initiators of the act were "naive if they think they can legislate honestly."

"I own certain things and it's my own business."

He said one of the questions on the government form asked him to list all corporations in which he owned more than one share.

"I have a good portfolio of speculative mining stocks and if they think I'm going to list that, then they've got another think coming."

Hamilton added that he had "nothing to hide."

HOLDUP GANGLAND STYLE

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — An armored car guard was shot in the head today as four heavily armed bandits got away with about $200,000 in a gangland style holdup.

Roadblocks were set up throughout northwestern Quebec after the four left this community, 100 miles east of Kirkland Lake, firing a hail of bullets.

Police identified the guard as Aldolph Potvin of Timmins. The bullet entered his head over the right eye and he had showed no signs of regaining consciousness.

"He is only mechanically living," said police chief Alain Grenier. "I think he'll die any minute."

The guard was shot as he stepped out of the Brinks armored vehicle which was carrying a $200,000 currency shipment to the Royal Bank of Canada branch on the main street.

Police said all roads leading out of this community have been sealed off. The robbers made their getaway in a yellow truck with Quebec licence plates.

Police said the robbers were armed with machine guns as well as small-calibre rifles.

NEWS BRIEFS

PLANE CRASHES AT AIRPORT

A twin engine Beechcraft plane crashed landed on a runway at Victoria International Airport at 11:30 a.m. today.

An RCMP spokesman said two people, a man and a woman, were aboard but neither was injured in the mishap which occurred in the centre of the field opposite the control tower.

An eyewitness said the plane, privately owned and registered in the United States, was unable to get its wheels down and landed on its undercarriage. No estimate of the damage is available.

Short Fall Sitting

Premier Barrett confirmed today a short session of the legislature will be held this fall but no date has been set. The premier would not disclose what legislation will be presented but he said "there won't be too many" pieces of legislation.

S. Koreans Protest

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korean protesters smashed through police lines and marched on the Japanese embassy today in a demonstration sparked by last week's assassination attempt against President Park.

NDP Plans To Push Its Image

The NDP government is planning a campaign to boost its image and begin "selling" itself to the people of B.C.

"We're going to do a better job of preparing and selling what we are doing," Premier Dave Barrett said this morning.

"We've been so busy really doing things that we haven't beat the drum."

A fence-mending tour of the province this fall is first on Barrett's agenda and he said other ministers also will be out visiting the hustings.

The idea of a new public image campaign came out of a two-day "think-tank" session at Mesachie Lake this week at which cabinet assessed its track record over the last two years.

Barrett denied the ministers had given themselves "A" on their ministerial report cards but said the cabinet is proud of its record and has no disappointments.

"If anything, I accused the ministers of being modest about their accomplishments."

"When you examine the accomplishments, you have to ask any opposition member exactly what policy it is that they are against. Because if you go through it point by point, they won't dare change any of the things we've done."

ROCKEFELLER PROFILE

Waitpersons on B.C. Menu

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

"Waitpersons" soon will be serving food in B.C.'s restaurants.

And the industry isn't too happy about it.

The new Human Rights Code will be proclaimed shortly and prohibits any sexual discrimination in job advertisements.

For restaurant owners the new legislation will mean no more job ads for waitresses or waiters.

"What it means is we, as managers, have lost our right to hire who we want to hire," said Don Bellamy, managing director of the B.C. region of the Canadian Restaurant Association.

"But I guess we've got to live with it unless the majority of CRA members wants to go for changes and then we'll have to go to the minister of labor," said Bellamy.

Some restaurant owners are trying to get around the law in their advertisements for employees.

One ad last week advertised openings for waiters and waitresses, but added: "Must fit our dresses." Another ad advertised for employees of either sex but told applicants that "skirted uniforms" would be provided.

A regional meeting of the association will be held in September and a plan of action discussed, he said.

"I've got an open mind," said Bellamy, adding that he is still studying the new legislation to determine its effect on the restaurant industry.

Bellamy saw the new act, along with the existing human rights legislation, for the first time this week.

Human Rights director Kathleen Ruff, who has been approaching operators around the province asking them to change their job ads, met with Bellamy to discuss sexual discrimination in hiring.

WELFARE CHEAT TO PAY DOUBLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge Tuesday warned welfare cheaters that they will be charged on a "two for one" basis if they are convicted in his court.

"For each dollar defrauded it is going to cost the accused persons two dollars," said Judge Les Bewley.

Judge Bewley delivered the warning before sentencing Andre Lemaire, 49, who was convicted of defrauding the social assistance department of $1,260.

In line with the judge's new formula, Lemaire was fined $1,260 and ordered to pay back another $1,260 to the social assistance department.

The court was told Lemaire admitted to detective Lorne Nalley he was gainfully employed and not entitled to the $1,260 in welfare money he received from January to May this year.

Rockefeller Confirmation Certain But Not Swift

Times News Services
WASHINGTON — Overwhelming praise except from some longstanding Republican foes virtually guarantees Nelson Rockefeller's confirmation as vice-president of the United States.

Chairmen of both House of Representatives and Senate confirmation committees declined Tuesday to set any target date for action and House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem. — N.J.) did not rule out confirmation after the November congressional elections.

"I'm not going to set any timetable except whatever timetable is necessary for thorough and responsible considerations," Rodino said.

The nomination, however, doesn't sit well with Sen. Barry Goldwater, who says it won't go over with rank-and-file Republicans and may deepen rather than heal party wounds.

"I can't support it," Goldwater said Tuesday.

"He's very well qualified. But I don't know what it's going to do to the Republican party... he's not the one to put the party together."

The senator also suggested that if Ford runs for president in 1976 he should dump Rockefeller, now 66, in favor of "a younger man."

Aside from Conservative Republicans, Rockefeller's only immediate Congressional critic was Representative Bella Abzug (Dem. — N.Y.).

"It is ironic that after Watergate an oil billionaire should be appointed to the vice-presidency by an appointed president," she said.

Rockefeller's nomination could unlock a secret that the former New York governor and his family have protected for generations — the size of his personal fortune.

Nobody really knows what Rockefeller is worth and, given the world-wide scope of the family's holdings, it is possible that he can get no more than a rough figure.

Rockefeller interests range from the largest group of supermarkets in South America to large oil companies; from a financial services company in Spain to Rockefeller Centre in mid-Manhattan; and from huge chunks of stock in the country's third largest bank to a collection of more than 1,500 art treasures.

Individually the Rockefellers, while very wealthy, are far below such tycoons as Jean Paul Getty and Howard Hughes.

In 1968, Fortune Magazine estimated that each of the Rockefellers was worth between $200 million and $300 million.

Together, which is the way they often invested, they are among the largest private economic forces in the world.

Sensitivity to talk about their wealth has been a Rockefeller tradition ever since the legendary John D. Rockefeller Sr., was castigated as a robber baron after making his fortune in the Standard Oil Co. trust in the late 19th century.

Questions about Nelson's worth were rebuffed Tuesday by spokesmen for Rockefeller family and associates, which manages the family's personal business affairs, and for Chase Manhattan Bank, where his brother David is chairman.

Of possibilities.

Holdings List Diverse

Even if it is difficult to put a dollar figure on it, the sheer scope of Rockefeller's holdings can give some indication of their value.

The only published figures of his stock holdings — he sold some stocks when he became governor in 1959 — are in the reports of International Basic Economy Corp., a family business run by his son Rodman.

IBEC is a diversified company which runs a variety of business (including the South American supermarkets). In the proxy statement for 1974, Nelson was listed as owning 419,900 common shares directly. His wife owns 12,255 shares and a trust for his younger children owns 109,392 shares of a special class of common stock. IBEC, which is publicly owned, trades for about $2.25 a share, likely making it one of his less important holdings.

Although bank officials consistently refuse to discuss the subject, Rockefeller is said to be a large shareholder in the Chase Manhattan Corp., parent of the Chase Manhattan Bank. Chase has been the "Rockefeller bank" for many decades.

The size of the family's interest is best reflected in the holdings of David Rockefeller who, as chairman, is required to report his ownership each year. The latest proxy statement for Chase showed David Rockefeller owned 337,500 shares of common stock (from which he receives annual dividends of $742,500.)

In 1959, when Nelson took office as governor, one report said that his own weekly income from dividends exceeded his annual salary from the state.

Rockefeller's personal fortune began with a $100 million trust fund set up by his father. Nelson also followed the family tradition by spending some time at the Chase bank, but he never showed much interest in business, preferring a career in government work. He also worked for a time as rental agent for Rockefeller Centre, built by his father.

As to the power of that money, in a visit to Jerusalem in 1972, Rockefeller remarked at a dinner that when the United Nations was considering establishment of the state of Israel in 1948, he heard that "a couple of votes were missing to assure UN approval of Israel's statehood, so I got in touch with a couple of Latin American republics and fixed the matter up for you."

Nothing like a little transfusion to put new life in an old purse.

Insurance

today's cost of construction is reckoned at $30 a square foot for replacement purposes — double the rate of a decade ago.

Jack Main, of Royal Insurance Group, said: "We know insuring a dwelling for $20,000 is unrealistic today. We'd lose money on replacement cost."

The point was emphasized by Dudley Blaschek, Vancouver Island division manager for Guardian, who built his home in 1962 for $20,000. Today the house and land have a market value of $50,000, which should be reflected in the insured value, excluding land value.

Main said his company's sales are up 21.4 per cent for the first six months of 1974 compared with the same period a year ago. With Autoplan taking all the vehicle business and ICBC in the general insurance field, "We realized we'd have to go aggressively after business," he said.

One area his company stresses is what it calls a "personalized program; we've thrown in a few frills that appeal (for example emergency road service), reduced rates and aimed at a better part of the market (middle and upper class)."

The Royal group has a finger-print formula by which house policy holders or the insurance agent may quickly revalue a property based on previous value, age, condition, construction materials and other factors, to come up with a new premium price.

Other companies use similar techniques to upgrade and renew policies.

Property and casualty insurance sales had been going very well, up 15-20 per cent this year, Blaschek said. Commercial property insurance values were up at least 40 per cent to June, and the company feels it is "getting its fair share," he said.

The picture is so good the staff economies which came with Autoplan are beginning to reverse. Blaschek said his staff was cut from 27 in early 1973 to 14, but he has hired one back ahead of schedule in order to help cope with business.

Eric Peake, of Wawanesa, said replacement cost today has a "definite bearing" on the higher value of premiums being written. Unlike the situation several years ago, today's practice when buying property protection is to ensure to replacement cost, Peake said.

A. E. Warwick, of Uniguard Mutual Insurance Co. and B.C. director for the Insurance Bureau of Canada, emphasized the departure of some of the largest insurance companies from B.C. operations, including B.C. Auto Club, State Farm, Liberty Mutual, Wesco and Allstate.

That meant fewer companies competing for the one-third of all indemnity coverage remaining to the private sector, even though ICBC had entered the field. But government insurance is not welcomed by everyone, Warwick said.

"We find there are not a lot of people clamoring to insure with the government — other than what they have to," Insurance buyers want a choice between private insurance and ICBC.

He said "70 per cent of the people are not NDPers and choose not to buy government insurance, whether the rate is lower or not."

The private insurance industry is reasonably happy with its state-owned competition, except for one matter where it is felt the government has an unfair advantage. Warwick said this is in coverage for schools, hospitals and municipal institutions, which the government requires ICBC to carry.

Warwick called it "a form of blackmail" for school boards and municipalities, which must accept the ICBC rates or lose their provincial government financial assistance programs.

He was expecting Unigard business to be up 25 per cent by year-end for property and general indemnity policies which were already up 15 per cent at $1 million for the first half of 1974.

RIGHTS

lowed discrimination in job ads.

"They've certainly got the right woman in the job," said Bellamy. "Those people are real pounders for what they believe in and I give them a full measure of credit."

But some outlets, such as Japanese restaurants, cater to a certain kind of service, he said, and want either men or women. Provision of washrooms and uniforms may also be a problem, he said.

In preparation for proclamation of the code, Ruff has been clipping discriminatory ads and mailing them back to employers with a request they change their ads to comply with the forthcoming legislation.

A staff of five has been working with the director to set up the mechanism to deal with the hefty new code.

The legislation was approved by the legislature last fall and gives the branch greater muscle in enabling it to initiate its own proceedings against employers, landlords and other officials who discriminate on the basis of sex, age, color or religion.

Ruff said her office receives only two or three formal complaints a week but is deluged with people who face discrimination but are not willing or able to initiate any suits themselves.

Asked if she feels her department is a leader in the cause for equality, Ruff said there is "no doubt about it, we are an enforcing agency."

"Sometimes I think we are a leader, simply because of the reactions we get from people," she said.

"People are against discrimination in theory," she said, "but when it comes down to actual practice it's different."

"Now for the first time we have a few officers and a budget and better legislation — so instead of a righteous statement we have a piece of legislation we can take seriously."

The code specifies penalties of as much as $5,000, for damages to "self-respect" and violations of the legislation.

It specifically prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, religion, color, sex, ancestry, place of origin, marital status or political beliefs.

People can not be discriminated against with regard to employment on the basis of having been summarily or criminally convicted, unless the conviction is related to the persons occupation.

Boards of inquiry will be empowered under the act to investigate complaints but Ruff said the list of persons to serve on those boards has not yet been published.

The exact date of cabinet proclamation of the new code is not known but Ruff said she expects it will be by September.

Prison Standoff Ends In Burst of Gunfire

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A former policeman turned criminal died in a burst of gunfire today, ending a 36-hour standoff by five prisoners holding a hostage in the jail atop the Potter County Courthouse, a sheriff's office spokesman said.

Killed was Darwin Meharg, 39. The spokesman, Sheriff's Capt. Art Fields, identified the dead man as Meharg, leader of the prisoners who took over the jail just before midnight.

A woman prisoner of the jail was taken out on a stretcher. At one time it was believed she was Meharg's girl-friend, Barbara Thiel, 40, one of the prisoners involved, but authorities later said it was not Mrs. Thiel.

Officers said they placed explosives on a door of the jail on the seventh floor of the courthouse and charged in when the blast went off.

The response by law enforcement officers followed several hours of fruitless negotiations involving the prisoners, Sheriff T. L. Baker and one of his captains, Don Smith.

City Police Chief Paul Hulse and a sheriff's deputy were wounded, authorities said, but apparently not seriously.

A jail trustee, Edward Hosper, was reported seriously wounded.

Sooke Trustees Hike Pay

The trustees raised their annual indemnity to $2,000 from $1,100.

Then they agreed to give a 4½ per cent mid-contract wage hike to their Canadian Union of Public Employees staff plus other non-teaching staff not in the union.

CUPE had requested the hike, effective from July 1 to Dec. 31, the date when the union's two-year contract with the school board expires.

"It's an extra they asked for and we thought it might help in the negotiations," Trustee Bill Stephenson said, adding that the 4½ per cent increase will cost the board $20,000.

token catching up, actually," added Trustee Isabelle Reader.

Only Trustee Ron Fitton questioned the move, asking: "We're not opening a can of worms, eh?" He wondered whether teachers would demand the same thing.

Funds for the CUPE raise will be obtained by reducing amounts spent on installation of underground watering for the current year.

New dual ingredient medicine double effective for hemorrhoid sufferers.

The combination of an anesthetic to relieve pain and itch quickly, and a soothing cream to help heal sore tissues makes new Hemoroids particularly effective on hemorrhoids.

Diperoxolone Hydrochloride — the water-soluble anesthetic — spreads long-lasting relief directly into sore tissues by combining easily with natural, protective body moisture. This helps Hemoroids' smooth cream to effectively coat the irritated area, quickly relieving pain and itch.

The anesthetic is carried in a soft-textured cream which can be spread over the most sensitive tissues without additional discomfort. And this soothing, cooling cream, in itself, has valuable healing properties. In suppository form, Hemoroids melts quickly and easily after insertion, becoming a gentle, healing cream.

the weather

Southern B.C. will be mostly sunny today but northern and central parts of the province will have more cloud and a few showers with some thunderstorm activity likely this afternoon in the eastern interior. This pattern will generally persist into Thursday except that a weak Pacific system moving into Western Washington is expected to spread cloudiness to the south coast. Temperatures will be on the cool side today in all areas with a further slight cooling trend expected for Thursday.

COUNCIL SLAMMED

Times News Services

WINNIPEG — Mayor Stephen Juba launched a round-house swing at certain members of city council today in announcing the resignation of Works Commissioner Jack Kyle.

"The city is in a state of chaos," he said. "We have a real crisis on our hands."

Further resignations at the highest level of the city's paid employees would be forthcoming, he warned. He laid the blame for Kyle's resignation squarely in the laps of certain aldermen who "have opposed the commissioner system from the start and are simply frustrating the commissioners at every turn."

The critics have opposed the commissioner system of government for Metro Winnipeg since it was instituted two and a half years ago, Juba said.

Since then, they have worked their ways into the highest elected echelons of council, he added. Kyle "has been working the candle at both ends trying to make the system work, and all he has met is ridicule and abuse from council," the mayor said.

Kyle has accepted a position with the government of Alberta. He resigns effective Dec. 31.

GM Rolls Back On Price Hike

Times News Services

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. today bowed to pressure from the White House to help fight inflation and announced it is trimming $54 from its planned price hike averaging nearly $500 on its 1975 model cars and trucks.

The average increase on GM's 1975 model cars, which are being put on sale as soon as dealers receive them, is now $446, including $100 to $160 for emission control equipment, $20 for higher destination charges and the remainder to cover the higher costs of labor and materials.

The move by the No. 1 U.S. auto maker, the acknowledged price leader, was seen as a gesture to take off the pressure that has been building since Aug. 9 when it announced the 9.5 per cent increase.

President Ford was sharply critical of the hike and had called for a reduction.

Ford Motor Co. President Lee Iacocca said Tuesday the No. 2 auto maker has little choice but to follow GM's lead on prices. Ford indicated in late July its increase on cars would average $418. But Iacocca said the hike now probably would be in the same range as GM increases.

Neither Chrysler Corp. nor American Motors has made any public disclosures on pricing action for 1975 models.

Meanwhile President Ford asserted Tuesday that he does "not expect to ask for any legislation for either standby or mandatory wage and price controls."

The statement came after a meeting with Democratic and republican leaders in congress and designed to head off any "anticipatory" wage or price hikes by business and labor. White house sources said.

Tuesday night the House voted to accept the senate's version of a wage-price monitoring agency within the White House designed to focus public attention on excessive wage or price increases. The agency, which will have a small staff and a funding of $1 million, will be called the Council of Wage and Price Stability. It has no authority to impose mandatory wage and price curbs.

Ford also told the congressional leadership that he planned to hold a televised summit conference on the economy in late September or early October.

L.A. Bombing Suspect Held

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — A Yugoslavian immigrant with a record of sex offences has been arrested for investigation of murder, and police say he is the "alphabet bomber" whose deadly charges have killed three persons.

Police and the FBI said Muharem Kurbegovic, 31, was taken into custody Tuesday night after he planted a tape recording in a trash can in a rest room at a Hollywood takeout restaurant.

They said Kurbegovic was the man who identified himself in telephone calls and other tape recordings as "Isaac Rasim," military leader of an organization he called Aliens of America.

He was called the alphabet bomber after threatening to spell out the group's name "in blood" unless immigration and sex laws were repealed.

After Kurbegovic's arrest, police aided by bomb-sniffing dogs searched his Hollywood apartment and hauled away what they described as a large cache of chemicals and explosives.

They said the haul included numerous bottles of clear liquids, several cans of gunpowder, a large spool of electrical wire, a cassette tape recorder, a gas mask, and a number of books on how to make bombs. Police would not say what the clear liquid was, but they said all of the material found could be used in making a large quantity of powerful explosives.

William Sullivan, assistant director of the FBI in charge of the Los Angeles office, said Kurbegovic was apparently acting alone and "at this time it would be my opinion that there is no such group as the Aliens of America."

Police said Kurbegovic, who had been employed until this week at a blueprint company in Los Angeles, was unarmed and offered no resistance when he was arrested.

Sullivan said Kurbegovic would be charged with murder in the explosion at Los Angeles International Airport which killed three persons and injured 35 on Aug. 6.

Last Friday night, in response to a warning from the man who called himself Isaac Rasim, police found a 25-pound bomb planted in a locker in a downtown bus station. The device was disarmed.

A police spokesman said plainclothes officers and FBI agents had been following Kurbegovic for more than 18 hours prior to his arrest at the restaurant.

Sullivan said the immigration service sifted the records of aliens living in the Los Angeles area, while police searched their records for aliens with records of sex offences.

He said Kurbegovic was an alien with such a record, although Sullivan declined to give any details.

POLLEN SUPPORTS FEMALE DEMANDS

Female clerical staff at City Hall pressing for better pay and advancement opportunities received some moral support Tuesday from Mayor Peter Pollen.

The mayor told reporters at his weekly news conference he is sympathetic toward "the girls at City Hall," and aside from more equitable wages he would support any move to give women employees better opportunities for promotion to middle and senior management positions.

Earlier this week, some 30 women on the city's clerical staff decided to campaign for improved conditions, in the forthcoming negotiations between the city and Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which represents the city's inside workers.

The current contract expires Dec. 31 and negotiations are expected to begin early next month.

Starting salaries are now $46 for a clerk-typist, $469 for a class-one, class-two stenographer and $569 for a secretary.

One female employee said she wondered how the city could equate the $700 a month paid to an unskilled laborer with the less than $600 an experienced secretary receives.

from worried parents.

"We owe them the courtesy of a letter and I feel quite strongly about it," she said.

Dunsmuir's 550 enrolment last year is expected to increase by 100 or more this fall. The school is being changed from a junior high to a junior-senior, with Grade 11 classes added this fall and Grade 12 classes added a year from now.

A new junior high will be built at Goldstream and Spencer for $2.5 million.

The 800-student school is still in the early planning stages, although the board says it needs the school by September 1975.

A committee of teachers has been appointed to advise on construction. The committee's first meeting, today, was to be a tour of Saanich School District's Parkland secondary.

Architect Don Marshall, who designed Parkland, is also designing the Spencer Road school.

Sooke school board will send a team to eastern Canada in October to study other buildings.

HASHISH HAUL POSES PUZZLE

SEATTLE (AP) — Federal authorities said today they don't know how nearly half a ton of hashish was smuggled into a University of Washington warehouse.

Federal narcotics agents Monday found between 800 and 1,000 pounds of the drug, worth $1 million, concealed in about two dozen aluminum, five-gallon specimen containers.

An assistant U.S. attorney had said Tuesday the illegal substance was thought to have been smuggled from the Canary Islands aboard the Atlantis II, a research vessel operated by the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution of Massachusetts.

But an institution spokesman said Atlantis II hasn't returned to the United States since beginning a research mission in February.

And Seattle U.S. Attorney Stan Pitkin said today, "we don't know for sure" how the drugs entered the country.

Federal sources indicated published reports that the hashish was smuggled in aboard a freighter appeared to be correct.

As Through a Glass, Darkly

The city's special committee on a future for the Crystal Garden site is not to be envied. It has a tough assignment. The former swimming pool and dancing centre is on one of the most usable properties in town, being close to the harbor recreation area and the shopping district and in a neighborhood adaptable to a number of proposals.

The trouble is: the deteriorating building, while still attractive looking, will require sizable funds to restore it to safe use, and that use will be somewhat restricted by the floor plan of a structure which is devoted mainly to a sunken pool and surrounding tiers for seating.

What to do? Devise some ingenious scheme that will utilize the building and its peculiarities; or write off the 50-year-old structure and concentrate on the possibilities of the location?

The committee has been asked to suggest ideas for development of the place. If it should broaden its enquiry and invite proposals from the public it can be sure that it will receive a good many, and be equally sure that only a limited number will be feasible. But out of the many suggestions there might develop a trend in public thinking which could serve as a guideline for the committee's selections. And there might even be a few sparkling concepts which could solve its problem.

There is a considerable body of opinion which favors retention of the building on sentimental grounds, and this should not be brusquely disregarded. But the cost of rehabilitation cannot be overlooked and retention should not stand in the way of a great new development which might be a welcome improvement on the whole scene. In particular, let's not revert to the tired idea of imprisoning fish, animals or birds in pools or cages where their misery will be our entertainment.

One of the problems of development will be the provision of better traffic conditions, for even now Douglas Street and Belleville are too narrow for the press of summer vehicles. One other consideration is that the location would be excellent for a recreational or entertainment type of development — not wax museums or similar static exhibitions — rather than commercial or residential, and nearby parking facilities will be a must.

Such thinking seems to point to a closer definition of possible uses. Could we be getting near some sort of multiple-use concert hall complex?

Dim Northern Lights in B.C.

Mack Sennett couldn't have written a better scenario as the mayors of three northern British Columbia municipalities chased provincial cabinet ministers up Vancouver Island last Monday. The Houston, Prince Rupert and Kitimat mayors had originally journeyed to Victoria to upbraid Alfred Nunweiler, minister without portfolio who is in charge of Northern Affairs, about promised economic development schemes. When told that Mr. Nunweiler was in the north and the rest of the cabinet was brainstorming at Mesachie Lake, the mayors borrowed a car, hightailing it off to the cabinet retreat.

After crashing the cabinet meeting the mayors finally got an audience with three cabinet ministers, including Resources Minister Robert Williams, who appears to be the northern light in provincial government politics. Ruffled municipal feathers were soothed and the mayors went away relatively satisfied. It is obvious the mayors had not done their homework — the man they originally sought was in the north going about his business — and if their intention was to embarrass the government, that too seemed to have backfired.

But it is not enough for Mr. Williams to blame the recent federal election for delays in the proposed $500 millions joint federal-provincial development projects. Eighteen months ago the resources minister talked of 25,000 new jobs, extended rail lines and two major investments which would help development in the Prairies. Was the acquisition of Pacific Western Airlines one of these investments? And what about B.C., which is supposed to be the minister's major concern?

Only Mr. Williams and the cabinet know for sure. A year and one half after a major policy announcement British Columbians deserve more information on northern development proposals than they have received to date. If the mayors were reassured the public deserves the same treatment.

the passing scenery — and even the staunchest Island booster must admit that one can tire of the scenery on the 50th trip. As the music is confined to the forward lounge on the main deck, uninterested passengers could find plenty of other areas to do their own thing.

Other than the Victoria Symphony's Heritage Court concerts there are few places where live music can be heard for free these days. The soft program music of the supermarket or office might have been cheaper but it doesn't take requests and it fails to impress children. While the provincial government has played some silly symphonies in the past two years they struck a happy note for tourists and Islanders alike, judging by the applause last Monday.

Play On, Sail On

When the New Democratic provincial government put musical groups on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferry run last summer many sour notes were sounded by some who thought it a needless expense and an annoyance to those who wished to contemplate the scenery. But the music persists and at least some public grumbling has turned to applause.

On the Queen of Esquimalt Monday a trio of bearded young men played their way through 30 years of popular music from Cole Porter to the Beatles. Harassed mothers relaxed as their children listened to probably the first live music they had ever heard. Regular ferry commuters had something else to do besides look at

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Paper Dollars

Imagine a world in which gold is the only money — all things are valued in terms of gold. The two questions are really the same, for this reason: if the Canadian federal government tries seriously to bring inflation under control, then all its own programs and policies must be directed to that end.

The finance department, the Bank of Canada and the other economic departments cannot fight inflation if half a dozen other departments are allowed to embark on ambitious spending programs — whether for housing or a subsidized transportation or new government ventures into business.

The blueprints for a brave new Canada will have to be held in reserve until they can be financed with real paper dollars instead of newly-printed money of rapidly decreasing value. But all things are valued in terms of gold.

If Trudeau means to beat inflation, instead of trying to make it more tolerable, his new government cannot play the role of the little Dutch boy sticking his finger into a leaky dike. The flood of rising, rising prices can never be stopped that way.

Rising prices for the last five years, anyway, are not the basic economic problem. They are effects rather than causes. The basic problem is the declining value of paper money, in the value of gold going up to $172 per ounce in western markets.

You may say it comes to the same thing. They are two sides of the same coin. But it makes all the difference in the world which side the government works on.

If it goes on increasing the supply of paper money far faster than the economy can possibly increase the supply of goods and services, money will go on decreasing in value. Prices will go on rising, rising and so Canadians will go on trying to increase their incomes faster.

If the governments take a larger and larger slice of the limited pie — they already take nearly 43 per cent of the gross national product — then incomes and prices will go on rising, rising to compensate for the extra taxation.

In Canada the mandarins and empire-builders of the civil services are responsible to elected ministers who are responsible to the Parliament. But the ministers have their own ambitions too, and the greater glory of the minister usually coincides with the growth of his department.

It is only at cabinet level that the rival ambitions of the departmental princelings can be reconciled or adjudicated. And at cabinet level the deciding voice is the prime minister's.

Whoever becomes Trudeau's next finance minister, the only hope of restoring the value of the paper dollar lies with Trudeau himself. A.D.C. McDougal, 1322 Blanshard St.

More Facts

Re your article on Beate Klarsfeld's "Nazi-hunting." The morality of it has no question — optimum survival for mankind dictated her actions.

What is in question is, who should be doing the job? It seems to me that there is an international police force — in name at least. There is a very evident lack of action on Interpol's part in handling this and similar situations. Interpol looks more like a private business with internal profit in mind than an attempt to promote the welfare of man.

I'd like to hear some good solid facts about Interpol. — Marion Gawpy, 45 Bernard Ave., Toronto.

Water Warning

It is an unfortunate fact of life that surface waters are open to contamination by man and beast. Only in limited access watersheds is there any control over this state of affairs.

Regrettably then, I must remind consumers that even when water looks clear and sparkling, nevertheless it can be contaminated. This does not mean that it will necessarily cause disease, but it does mean the potential is there.

The Medical Health Officers of this province have gone on record as advising that all surface waters be treated (either by chlorination or boiling) before consumption. I concur with this view.

This timely reminder is prompted by the complaint of a consumer that she had never been told that it was necessary to treat surface water. On that particular water source, the cows upstream had only too obviously been indiscriminate in their deposition of faeces (stools). — A. S. Arneil, M.B., Ch.B., B.P.H., Regional Health Officer.

Children's Movies

I would like to comment on a situation which I feel not only to be unfair but also a very poor business practice.

Each time a Walt Disney movie is on at a theatre in Victoria the admission price for children is raised to $1 per child. Several weeks ago I took my children to see "The Sting." This movie won the award for being the Best Picture of the Year; among many other awards. The admission price to this movie was 75c per child.

Movies made by Disney Studios are, I believe, for children.

I think that the increase in admission price, although only 25c, is a disgrace. I feel, as a mother of five, that if any change in price comes about it should be downward. Children today see enough misery, violence, etc. around them from day to day. To see the wholesome type of movie, e.g. "Herbie Rides Again" showing currently, is like a breath of fresh air. Parents should not have to pay "special" prices for these types of movies.

There are too few children's shows shown here. I think that theatre managers should take a good hard look at this policy. These movies get advance "free" publicity each Sunday night on television.

I know that I am not alone in my feelings. I have talked recently with many irate parents about this.

I hope that when this letter is printed other parents will get together and put on some pressure for a change. — Rosemary Laframboise, 1739 Bay St.

"... okay, so it's a gas-burning monster ... but look at it this way ... it's an investment ... ten years from now it might be worth double what you paid for it, as a collector's item. ..."

'Masquerading as Democracy'

STOCKHOLM — My 11 years in Sweden, now ending, have been a somewhat dispiriting experience, for I have watched the development of what self-styled progressives from the four corners of the earth are pleased to see as a model for the future. If this is really the prospect before us, I see little reason for joy.

A visiting journalist once described Sweden as "a totalitarian State masquerading as a democracy." It was a remarkable flash of perspicacity, based as it was on his first interviews with trade union bureaucrats. It was also a piece of irony, since the man had been invited by the Swedish Government, which is increasingly preoccupied with its image abroad, and excessively keen on demonstrating that it really presides over the most democratic of all democracies. But this judgment at any rate expresses the reason for my discontent.

Sweden, as few will now need to be reminded, is the epitome of the welfare state; the model of affluence, where poverty is outlawed; the Mecca of the social engineer. It is egalitarian, orderly, well run and mostly efficient.

But the price has been too heavy for my taste. As the welfare state has been extended and private enterprise controlled, so have the government bureaucracy and the labor movement apparatus consolidated their power.

Different

If their history had been different, the Swedes might be said to have sold their birthright for a mess of pottage. Two centuries ago, however, Voltaire remarked that the Swedes were the only people he knew who, supposedly possessed of all possible freedom, gladly abrogated all their rights to a strong ruler. He was talking about that royal despot, Charles XII, but his remarks apply equally well to the constitutionally-elected Social Democratic Government of today.

In the course of my coverage here, I have watched many parliamentary elections. On several occasions the opposition non-socialist parties have been on the verge of winning power. But at the last moment they have rattled and done some murky deal with the government, as if mortally afraid of change. That is why the Social Democrats have remained in power for 42 years and, despite a present parliamentary deadlock, are securely in the saddle.

The official government propagandists, perturbed at the sight of a regime that has now outlived most overt dictatorships, try to explain away the situation by blaming the ineptitude of opposition politicians. This is spurious argumentation. I have come to the conclusion that it is what the man-in-the-street wants. He is afraid of a change of government because it would mean change, and the threat of insecurity. He has no interest in politics: he only wants good administration and strong rulers.

Given this growing meekness of the ruled, the rulers have understandably advanced their position. The legislature, never very powerful in Sweden, has been reduced to a cipher. The real power lies in the hands of the party bosses, the bureaucrats and the trade union leaders, who together form an impregnable ruling establishment.

I have watched the advance of a corporative society that would have gladdened the heart of that disappointed Socialist, Benito Mussolini. The individual has been suppressed and corporative organizations have taken over. Most ominous of all, I have seen the evolution of a voluntary collective tyranny. Groupthink has triumphed.

The collective has been elevated above all else. It is as if the average Swede has decided that liberty rocks the boat: that to forgo it is a reasonable price to pay for social security. There is an intolerance of independent thought. Deviation from the collective opinion, the consensus, is now regarded as among the worst of crimes. Any parliamentarian, for example, who ventures a private conviction that contradicts the national consensus will be publicly crucified by his political kith and kin.

... no comfort

Saddest of all, this "tyranny of the compact majority" — as the Norwegian playwright Henrik Ibsen once put it, has been promoted by the media. There is no censorship in Sweden: it is superfluous, seeing that the media censor themselves by instinct.

All this is terribly depressing, but all cannot be unrelievedly dark and hopeless, it might be argued. There must be some light among the shadows. True enough, but it is on the dangers and the threats to a way of life that one must concentrate when one is under siege.

In Sweden, the compensations are from God, not man. Thus, all the prosperity and orderliness derive from a happy accident: a country rich in natural resources with a population in proportion, and not too large. The real lesson to be learned is that of size. Perhaps a small country has something to be said for it. Thus argument about Sweden has been focused wrongly: it has concentrated on system where it ought to be devoted to the question of size.

There are other small countries, notably Switzerland, which is just as well run, but boasts less — and whose neutrality, incidentally, is refreshingly honest, consistent and worthy of respect. So those who look to Sweden as a model for the world might do better to see it in relation to size rather than socialism versus the opposite.

As far as I am concerned the Sweden experiment is too close to 1984 and Brave New World for comfort. And there has been no comfort in the fact that the present Prime Minister, Mr. Olof Palme, has harried certain foreign correspondents when their reporting does not mirror the official line.

But Sweden has not been my whole parish. Finland, with which I have been concerned, has also been a source of gloom. While the Finns are wholly admirable, history has put them at the mercy of Russia. Their rulers have decided that appeasement is the path to take. I have consequently watched how freedom of expression has been whittled away to avoid antagonising the Kremlin. Finland in many respects has taken on the semblance of a Soviet satellite, albeit with a constitutional Western form of government. The word "Finlandization," coined to designate this particular condition, is not an empty term. It, too, may have ominous connotation for the rest of Western Europe.

Compensations

The real compensations have come from Norway and Denmark. There, the process and mentality of Western democracy still flourish. Both are traditionally Social Democratic strongholds, and bulwarks of the welfare State, but they lack the totalitarian trends of Sweden. Both to their credit have recently deposed Socialist governments in the interests of healthy politics and change.

In both countries, people are willing to fight for their ideas, to criticise, and to respect the view of the individual. Both have avoided the spiritual aridity which will be my abiding memory of Sweden.

On the whole, my Scandinavian years have not induced particular optimism. There are trends which suggest that I may indeed have peeped into the future, that this is what the political bosses elsewhere are diligently trying to copy, and that what is in store for the West may indeed be a "totalitarian State masquerading as a democracy." That, in a sentence, is the lesson I have learned.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Aug. 21, 1914:

Paris: The Petit Parisien's review of the war situation today says: "A great battle is preparing. Belgium is to be the theatre of the most formidable shock in history, the duration of which escapes prophecy. Repulsed in the march at Dinant by the French, the Germans have been making a vigorous offensive movement toward the north which forced the Belgians, after a fine resistance, to fall back on Antwerp. The Berlin government will claim a triumph, whereas from a strategical point of view, the movement was of mediocre importance. The French armies have taken up their respective positions and are prepared to deal with the enemy."

Rockefeller: All-American All Politician

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN

Nelson Rockefeller still has that All-American air. He looks as if he had been well-exercised, milk-fed though not pampered; he looks as if he had led the good life without self-indulgence, in church, squash court and Rotary Club.

To see him campaigning is to watch a professional. The great smile, the shirt sleeves, the outstretched hand, the imperviousness to insult, the friendly, deferential "I'm Nelson Rockefeller" as he submits himself to the ritual humiliation of an election, all these are in the classical routine and they work. He is ready to consume, on the sidewalk, prodigious quantities of those foreign delicacies that Jewish, Polish and German Americans prefer from their shops. Traditionally the eating of these prove that a candidate's heart — and stomach — are in the right place and that he is out for the minority vote.

It is all very innocent and rather tedious, but Nelson Rockefeller appears to love it. Yet it would be hardly more surprising to find Prince Charles behaving in the same way. In theory Rockefeller bears a name that renders him utterly unsuited to the democratic process.

It was once the most hated name in the United States. Its power extended to Europe, to China, to wherever poor men lit an oil lamp to prolong the day. It was the archetype of robber capitalism that amassed riches by cover violence, by stealth and bribery and trickery.

Nelson's grandfather was John D. Rockefeller, the arch-capitalist and probably the richest man in history. He was dedicated to money — and to oil — and was cartooned as an octopus and epithetized as an anaconda. A leading senator described him as "the greatest criminal of the age." In 1905, there was a move by the Congressional Board of Missions to return $100,000 he had given them — and this despite the fact they had asked for it and already spent it. They used the phrase "tainted money."

His son, John D. Rockefeller Jr., who died in 1960, was a larger, plumper man. He was uncertain of his identity; overwhelmed by the unearned wealth and privilege, devoted to his father. He married the daughter of a lordly senator from Rhode Island, Nelson Aldrich, who was as conservative as Rockefeller was rich. John D. Rockefeller Jr. collected Chinese porcelain. In 1924 he paid more taxes than anyone else in the country.

His benefactions were spectacular. It is estimated that his father gave away $531 million and he $473 million. He left six children. There was a girl, Abby, married. There was John D. the third, born in 1906, who now heads the Rockefeller Foundation set up by the Grandfather, which gives itself a world-wide role of constructive benevolence. There is Laurence, born in 1910, who concerns himself with his father's Rockefeller Centre for the Performing Arts, with conservation and the management of the family estate. There was Winthrop (1912-1973), who, after divorcing "Bobo" Sears with a settlement of $5 million, withdrew to the southern state of Arkansas, where he was Governor and did something to lift the state out of the spiritual and economic squalor left by Little Rock and Governor Faubus. And there is David, who has made a success as head of the Chase Manhattan Bank (the Rockefeller Bank) and is also much involved with the Museum of Modern Art.

And then there is Governor Nelson, who comes third in age, born in 1908. In all there are some 40 grandchildren of that reasonably fecund, pitiable and apparently happy old man.

Little to worry about

The signing Rockefellers were said a few years ago to have each an income of $5 million a year and holdings of $200 million. The columnist Stewart Alsop estimated the family holdings as $10,000 million. But money like this, as with expanding nebulae, is difficult to calculate exactly. Far greater sums have been mentioned. For certain they have little to worry about. And because of the growth of the public sector in the U.S., such money no longer brings a commanding political influence. Still, it is useful and serves as a increasingly necessary launching pad for a political career aimed at the summit of power.

Nelson Rockefeller has used this pad to provide himself with experts, offices, private jet transport and professional publicity. He has not used it in the lavish, the ostentatious manner of the Kennedys — which is reasonable in New York. His certified expenses were $1,700,000 — which is reasonable in New York. His money is not considered a liability, it is nowadays regarded as a guarantee of honesty and political effectiveness.

Nelson was brought up in the accepted Rockefeller manner. This meant regular church-going, Bible-reading and Sunday-school. It also meant the learning of respect for money, a careful accounting of every cent, and gifts to suitable charities. He was brought up on the vast Pocantico estate, 30 miles from New York City, at a seaside mansion in Maine and in a large New York house. It meant governesses, squash courts, ponies, tutors, private gyms and the ambience of his father's art collection.

He was sent to a progressive school in which Negroes on scholarships were carefully included. (It was subsequently taken over by the extreme Left Wing and sunk without trace.) He went to the small but exclusive Dartmouth College where, as a thesis, he wrote a passionate defence of his grandfather's methods. In this college, he was devout, sober and earnest. He did not particularly distinguish himself, bore his name confidently, and was reasonably well-liked.

After some privileged dabbling in various family businesses, he took over management of the Rockefeller Centre in New York. This is a huge complex of steeped skyscrapers built in the American collegiate-gothic manner across Fifth Avenue from St. Patrick's Cathedral. This was the time of the depression and office property was not easy to let. His competitors thought his letting methods too aggressive to be quite ethical.

Then, because of some large investments, he became interested in South America. He set up development corporations there that were to be run on business lines. This at the time was new ground. He wanted to advance underdeveloped countries and show a profit which would be a sign of the health of the project: benevolent and fruitful capitalism. He brought supermarkets to Venezuela and helped to make market gardening profitable for smallholders.

In 1930 he married a grand Philadelphia lady — and there is nothing much grander than that. She was Mary Todhunter Clark, beautiful and intelligent though a little wary of politics. They have five children, one of whom, Steven, married one of their maidservants. No objections.

He served in Washington under three Presidents on South American projects. President Franklin D. Roosevelt took him in first to run, for four years, the office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs. Opponents called it a "cultural boondoggle." It was based on the idea that self-help should be the aim rather than charity.

He then did a stint as Assistant-Secretary of State for Latin America in the State Department, in which he was accused by some, unfairly, of being too kind to Latin military dictators. He also got the American delegation at San Francisco to insist on Article 51 of the United Nations Charter, which allows nations the right to individual and collective self-defence. It later justified the creation of NATO. But the diplomatic pros resented him, and he was fired by President Truman in 1945.

Later he became an assistant to President Eisenhower, advising on foreign policy and defence. His committee produced the idea that U.S. relations with the Soviet Union should be based on mutual inspection rather than obviously impossible mutual trust. Through group consultation he helped to evolve an American policy based on the following broad principles:

1. There should be a full disclosure of the dangers facing the United States: this would stiffen the national will.
  2. The U.S. should have the best possible national defence.
  3. There should be aid to free countries — so that they, too, could join in the process of defence.
  4. There should be continued pressure on the Communists, so that they would reveal the reality of their plans.
- In 1958 Rockefeller took the bold step of entering electoral politics. The Democrat Averell Harriman was standing as Governor of New York for a second time. For the Republicans it seemed hopeless. And they accepted Rockefeller because in such circumstances it is better to have a rich man who can at least pay the bills after it is over.

Phenomenal campaigner

Because of the Pocantico estate, he was presented as an up-state candidate rather than a Wall Street one — that would have been poison to the farmers. The rich man with the legendary surname was expected to be a dilettante but proved to be a phenomenal campaigner. One hard-bitten professional said of him: "They come to see whether he's for real and then, bang, he's got 'em. I don't know what's doing it, that grin or the winks he throws around, or just that he looks so goddam regular they believe in him. I guess he surprises them. Whatever it is, it's dynamite."

Normally in such an election, the candidate must get the support of a small group in the party machine who will virtually select the delegates to the nominating state convention. Their first consideration tends to be their own future within the hierarchy of the party. They are therefore suspicious of independently-minded candidates, and they often subordinate the chance of victory — as well as their principles — to making sure that their man will be reliable. But Rockefeller slipped through their fingers and, in a year that scythed down Republicans, despite Eisenhower playing father in the White House, won a victory that made him a national figure. In that election, between the rich and responsible Harriman and the rich and responsible Rockefeller, there was no great ideological difference.

Rockefeller just won — aided by some fortuitous and rather 19th-century Democratic scandals that were no fault of Harriman. Rockefeller had shown his abilities.

He was Governor of the state of New York for 15 years, and is judged one of the greatest they have had. He raised taxes — which was brave; he doubled state spending — which was efficient. He developed the best medical aid service in the entire country. He organized a great state university, built roads, gouged out parks, reclaimed slums, tried to tackle the racial revolt with understanding, made sense of a chaotic finance system. He had a relationship with Richard Nixon which seemed to be confined to exposing their teeth for the photographers and pawing each other's shoulders in public in the false political manner.

While in office he suffered a personal disaster and also a tragedy. In 1961, after 31 years, his marriage broke up. The break was preceded by a lot of New York gossip columns writing about "What Governor is going out with who?" It ended enigmatically. A fire broke out in the Governor's Mansion in Albany; Nelson helped his wife down the ladder; she went away to a separate hotel and they were not seen together in public again.

While the divorce was proceeding his son Michael was in an outrigger canoe off the wild coast of West Irian (formerly Dutch New Guinea). Caught in a sudden storm, the native boat carrying him and a Dutch ethnologist was swept out to sea, and capsized. Rockefeller, buoyed up by two empty petrol tins, set out to swim to the shore against his companion's advice, and was last seen making slow headway about three miles from the coast. The Dutchman stayed on the capsized boat, and was rescued next day by a patrol boat. It could have been exhaustion, sharks in the sea or crocodiles on a vile shore. The Governor flew there and went back to tell his estranged wife.

Later he married Mrs. Margaretta ("Happy") Fidler Murphy, who is a natural politician's wife. The public particularly disliked the fact that Happy accepted the necessity of losing her children to obtain her own divorce, and resented the fact of a divorced chief of state. They seriously reduced his majority in 1962.

Rockefeller seems relatively immune from that special Furor Americanus which drives little senators and obscure governors mad with the lust to be president, and often, in the process, deprives them of their acquired powers of political calculation. He is driven by a sort of richesse oblige. He welcomes work and problems. He had no need to be reassured by power. He is not a poor little rich man trying to justify himself.

He toyed with the possibility of the Presidency in 1960 but withdrew, and that was a time when he could have beaten Nixon and would probably have beaten Kennedy. But the pros prevented the confrontation — and how clumsy the pros can be!

In 1964 he was booed horribly at the Republican Convention for his liberal distaste for Senator Goldwater. He lost the nomination to Nixon in 1968, and continued to govern New York until eight months ago — and, as he put it, to "keep my options open" for higher national office.

CANADIAN POLICY: DEFERENCE TO THUGS

By JAMES EAYRS

Our new secretary of state for external affairs doesn't know much about foreign policy. But as a former government leader in the House of Commons, Allan MacEachen should know a lot about politics.

One of whose Ten Commandments is "Hedge your bets."

Here is an injunction to which Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and former foreign minister Mitchell Sharp paid insufficient heed. They did not hedge their bets about the military dictatorship in Greece.

One would think that dictatorship was destined to rule Greece forever, so loath was our government to do anything that might cause it to take offence.

There was Ottawa's undue deference towards a gang of thugs whose ways of holding on to power caused NATO to come to stand for "North Atlantic Torturers' Organization."

There was no evidence, Sharp told the House of Commons in May, 1970, "to suggest that the Greek government ordered or encouraged the use of torture or that it had tried to maintain itself in power by this means." Amnesty International knew otherwise.

There was Ottawa's refusal to threaten Greece with expulsion from NATO. "Greece should remain in the alliance" — it is Sharp speaking once more — "so that we and other members may maintain our lines of communication with the Greek government. This is the only way I can see for us all to work for the restoration of freedom and democracy in that country."

Most of all, there was Ottawa's refusal to consort with the leader of the Panhellenic Liberation Movement — a force foremost in the movement for a free and independent Greece. The government of Canada, it appeared, was scared to be seen talking with Andreas Papandreu.

It was not as if he was hard to find. Papandreu's years in exile were spent not on some remote island but on the outskirts of Toronto.

There he was anything but incommunicado. Students of York University, whose economics faculty he adorned, benefited from his inspiring personality as well as from his academic expertise.

But for the policy community in Ottawa, Papandreu was persona non grata. No one sought his counsel, no one paid him heed.

The new foreign minister of Portugal tells of trying, when leader of the then outlawed Socialist Party, to reach the U.S. State Department. "I never got higher than a third secretary." With the department of external affairs, Papandreu never got as high as a third secretary.

The prime minister found time for Barbra Streisand but none for Papandreu. His letters to Trudeau went unanswered.

Such studied incivility is all the more remarkable when contrasted with Papandreu's reception in Australia. Where Ottawa had given him the cold shoulder, Canberra gave him the warmest welcome.

A photograph showing him with the Australian prime minister is inscribed: "To Andreas Papandreu — with best wishes from his Australian colleague, Gough Whitlam." It is dated April 17, 1974.

Four months later, his enforced Canadian exile ended, Papandreu has returned in triumph to his native land.

The Australian prime minister hedged his bets. The Canadian prime minister did not. Papandreu is said not to forget his friends. Those who do not forget others who would not become their friends.

Our scornful treatment of the prospective leader of a free and independent Greece is more than mere bad manners. It is a foreign policy mistake.

A Papandreu government was expected to take Greece out of NATO. Now a Carmanlis government has gone and done it first.

"NATO does not exist any longer for Greece," her foreign minister said bitterly last week.

"Greece is no longer a member of this organization."

Whether, as is rumoured, such a precipitate departure was designed to cut as much ground as possible out from under Papandreu on his re-entry into Greek domestic politics, Greek resentment is both understandable and justified.

NATO was to have been the instrument of Greece's freedom and security. Instead, it has been the instrument of Greece's servitude and humiliation. And Canada must share the blame.

Canadian diplomacy played a major role in admitting Greece and Turkey as full members of NATO. The key decision was taken in September 1951, at a NATO Council meeting in Ottawa.

As L. B. Pearson, who presided over it, remarks in his memoirs, the Ottawa setting was ironic. "I had opposed bringing in these two eastern Mediterranean countries since I believed that this made nonsense of the North Atlantic character of our association, diminished our credibility as the foundation for an Atlantic community, and gave greater validity to the criticism that we were purely and simply a military alliance."

How right he was. But on this occasion, as on others, Pearson lacked the courage of his convictions. He ended a masterly exposition to the NATO Council of all the reasons for keeping Greece and Turkey out by recommending that they be brought in.

The Pentagon was pleased. So was our bluff ambassador in Ankara, in whose military mind all was cut and dried. Major General Victor Odum had succumbed to a classic case of "localitis" — that occupational malady among diplomats the symptom of which is to pick up the prejudices of the foreign capital.

"Turkey is the only thing that really matters when strength for battle is considered," Odum urged on Pearson. "To win the war, I believe the all-out support of the Turkish Army remains necessary."

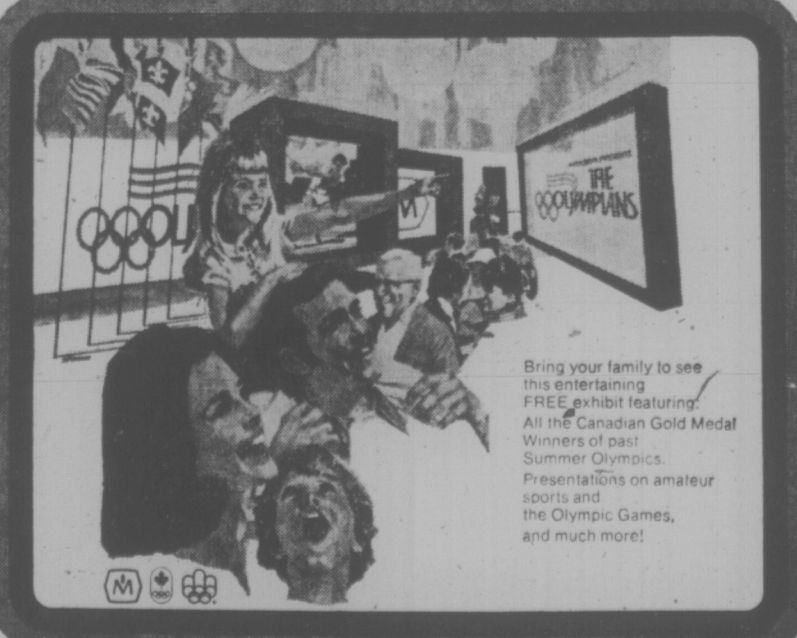

No one under-estimated the ferocity of the Turkish Army — just as no one foresaw that when its "strength for battle" was finally deployed, it would be not against the Russians but against its own allies.

The best to you

Ottawa Urged to Withhold Funds for North Expansion

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The British Columbia Wildlife Federation Tuesday called on the federal government to withhold all support of industrial development in northwestern B.C. and the Kootenays.

The federation asked in a telegram that Regional and Economic Expansion Minister Don Jamieson withhold $225 million earmarked for the projects.

The BCWF said the province was not living up to a federal requirement that full and meaningful environmental studies be made and that planning in the areas was "chaotic."

The demands culminated a week of speculation in which eight northwestern mayors, in a stand contradictory to that of the BCWF, voiced fears of an apparent decline of provincial interest in the joint federal-provincial development scheme, first announced in July 1973.

The provincial government reaffirmed its support for the rail, port and resource development Monday.

BCWF executive director Bill Otway said Tuesday study teams assigned to the northwest were rushed and that development was proceeding too fast.

Otway said the telegram from federation president Ed Mankelov stated that time and territorial constraints imposed on northwest study teams make them virtually useless and the federal government should withhold funds according to an existing policy which requires full and meaningful studies.

BURNABY (CP) — The British Columbia Telephone Company will build a $30 million head office complex here as soon as the land is rezoned to allow it.

The building consists of two phases, an 18-story terraced office tower and an additional seven-storey northern wing.

Gordon F. MacFarlane, vice-president of corporate development for B.C. Tel, said: "A building of the same size built downtown would have to be over 30 storeys high."

The office complex, to be built opposite Central Park on the Burnaby side of Boundary Road, will have 610,000 square feet of office space, and underground parking for 300 cars.

Burnaby Mayor Tom Constable welcomed the new building.

"It will definitely improve the area," he said. Constable said the move is in keeping with the Burnaby town centre plan, Boundary Road will be widened as part of the plan.

A 6.7-acre site for the office complex will be landscaped along with the first 11 terraced levels of the building itself.

The company hopes to move into the building by December, 1976.

MacFarlane said moving from the office space now rented downtown should have many kinds of hidden costs such as those incurred by moving from building to building and mailing costs. B.C. Tel's 1,800 employees are now spread over a dozen different buildings.

HOUSING UNITS FOR JERICHO

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 300 housing units and about $1.6 million for development of the former Jericho defence lands were announced Tuesday by Mayor Art Phillips and parks board chairman Art Covie.

Included in plans for the area are 100 units of senior citizens' housing, 200 townhouses and abandonment of a straight waterfront roadway through the Jericho lands.

The plans did not say how many acres are involved or how much the city originally paid for the land.

PENTICTON (CP) — The British Columbia Fruit and Vegetable Workers' Union, Local 1572, and 20 Okanagan Valley fruit packing houses have signed a two-year contract.

A total of 1,700 workers are involved.

The new contract provides a 70-cents-an-hour increase Sept. 1, and an additional increase of 20 cents an hour Sept. 1, 1975.

NELSON (CP) — Dr. C. L. Kaller, president of Notre Dame University here said Tuesday he hopes the British Columbia government will act soon to clear up uncertainty over the future of the school.

The government announced in June it will take over the privately-run university but did not specify exactly what programs it will have.

KELOWNA (CP) — Art Bothe, president of local 1370 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners here was charged with possession of stolen property valued at $15,000.

The charges were in connection with more than 2,000 items taken from construction sites, building supply and hardware stores in the Kelowna area in the past two years.

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Police Tuesday identified Eric Newmann, 19, of Delta, as the man killed in a single-vehicle accident here Monday.

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Glen F. King, 17, of Stewart, was identified as the youth killed Thursday at the Grandue Operating Co. in Stewart. Police said a run-away front-end scoop vehicle collided with a vehicle carrying mine workers to work.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A United Steelworkers of America official has asked Attorney-General Alex Macdonald to ensure that RCMP officers be given special training in the investigation of mining accidents.

In a letter to the minister, Paul Falkowski said the RCMP should also be equipped with special equipment to detect gas, vapors and fumes.

Mine Surprised Woman Won Expense Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for Lornex Mining Corp. said Tuesday he is surprised by a British Columbia Human Rights Commission order for the company to pay a former woman employee $2,713 in living expenses.

Charles Reno, Lornex general manager, said the commission turned down chemist Bonnie Buckwa's case against the company in May, but because of "a question of new evidence" they granted her an appeal.

"She took exactly the same case to the commission after it was thrown out essentially for having no merit," Reno said.

The company is still studying the situation and a decision on whether to pay the money won't be made until after a meeting with Lornex lawyers later this week, said Reno.

Buckwa was hired as a chemist at the company's mines in the Highland Valley but was not allowed to live in an employee camp where workers expenses are heavily subsidized.

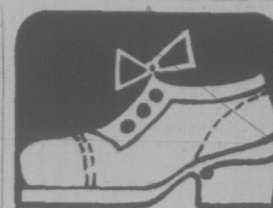

Buckwa said that during the year she worked for the company living facilities and travel expenses cost her $2,713.

Reno said that while a woman has never lived in the camp before "I don't know that it would have been impossible to find her a place."

He said, however, that other employees doing jobs similar to Buckwa's currently live in the camp.

The commission, in what director Kathleen Ruff termed "a significant precedent," overturned its earlier decision in favor of the company and ordered it to reimburse Buckwa for her expenses.

Impeachment: Final Curtain

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The House Judiciary Committee ended its historic impeachment inquiry of Richard Nixon Tuesday by the simple act of filing a report which the House accepted as part of its official record.

Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, stood on the House floor and said: "Mr. Speaker, I submit a privileged report pursuant to House Resolution 803."

That resolution adopted by a vote of 410 to 4 on Feb. 6, officially directed the committee to investigate and report on whether Nixon should be impeached and removed from office.

Tuesday, the House voted 412 to 3 to three to accept the report, print it in the Congressional Record and commend the committee for its "conscientious and capable" inquiry.

The word "accept" rather than "approve" was carefully chosen in order to place the official stamp of the House on the committee's work without stirring a last bitter debate that might have developed if it appeared the committee was seeking a vote on impeachment.

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles, U.S.S. marshal Gaylord Campbell said Tuesday he was "negotiating" with representatives of Nixon on where and when to serve a subpoena on the former president.

Nixon has been ordered to appear Sept. 9 at the opening of the Watergate cover-up trial.

The subpoena, received Monday morning still had not been presented Tuesday afternoon.

"I will make a professional and discreet service on Mr. Nixon," he said. "Due to the unique nature of the case, I am negotiating with Mr. Nixon's representatives for a mutual agreement on time and place."

In a final jump before he attempts a half-mile flight across Idaho's Snake River canyon next month, Evel Knievel Tuesday night set a world motorcycle jumping record by soaring over 13 trucks.

Knievel was cheered by more than 21,000 fans at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto when his 750 c.c. motorcycle landed on an eight-foot ramp butted against the 13th truck. The previous record of 12 trucks was also set by Knievel.

Before his jump Tuesday night, Knievel told reporters he was eager to ride his steam-powered "sky cycle" across the Snake canyon Sept. 8 despite the fact both test shots have failed.

Lum: Roy Road Houses For Low, Mid-Incomes

The 400-unit housing development to be built in the Roy Road area will be designed for low and middle income families, Saanich Mayor Ed Lum said Tuesday.

The project was approved by provincial and municipal authorities late last week.

"This was the objective of the municipality when we embarked on this project three or four years ago," Lum explained. "It's solely for those who cannot afford to buy a house at today's prices."

Lum was answering an accusation by James Nelson, director of the Victoria Rental Aid Service, that the project was for middle income families.

lies an dshould, instead, help people on low income and old age pensioners.

Nelson wants a four-way distribution of the housing — 100 units for pensioners, 100 for low income families, 100 for those on assistance and 100 for middle income families.

Lum said the emphasis would be on supplying housing to those who needed it.

Deputy Saanich planner Gil

Laurenson says "different forms of arrangement" will help make the project attractive.

There will be a meld of single family houses and row housing on about 120 acres, Laurenson said, with lots of green space.

Some of the homes will be placed on the back of lot lines in order to make as much green space available as possible.

If you've suffered long enough with hemorrhoids, try new Anusol Plus.

Suffering with hemorrhoids for even five minutes can be five minutes too long.

However, if you've put up with hemorrhoid pain on and off for several years now, new Anusol Plus is here to bring you some long overdue relief.

First it contains an anesthetic ingredient. This numbs the maddening itch of hemorrhoids. It cools that searing, burning sensation. And it eases away even severe hemorrhoid pain. And, while it does all this almost as soon as you apply it, the relief it gives will last for hours.

Then, once the pain is looked after, new Anusol Plus does several things to help your hemorrhoids heal.

A gentle decongestant helps to reduce hemor-rhoid swelling and inflammation. A soothing, cooling emollient guards tender hemorrhoid tissues against further irritation.

And two antiseptic ingredients help to curb infection. What's more, Anusol Plus comes in a silky smooth cream form. So it goes on gently, without adding to your suffering.

When new Anusol Plus looks after hemorrhoid symptoms this well, don't you think it's time that you tried it? Sold at pharmacies only, in cream or suppository, ask for new Anusol Plus. It's the hemorrhoid medication that says you've suffered long enough.

NEW BID FOR LAND BY SPORTS AUXILIARY

The Victoria Sports School Auxiliary has approached a second school board looking for free land on which to erect a $75,000 gymnasium.

The non-profit group, which had been negotiating with the Greater Victoria board earlier this year, has written the Sooke board asking for property.

The proposed gym would be a plastic air-supported "bubble" with 6,000 square feet of space reserved for an apparatus gymnasium and 4,000 square feet an open gym for school children and the public to play badminton or volleyball.

The Victoria board decided last month that it would be unlawful to provide school board land for something that isn't strictly educational, unless the sharing agreement is with a municipality.

Sooke Tuesday appointed Trustee Ron Fitten to study the request.

Nixon Won't Lose Wiring

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government is going to re-examine all publicly-financed items installed in Richard Nixon's Florida and California homes with an eye to recovering what it profitably can, says the head of the General Services Administration (GSA).

Arthur Sampson said his agency will "look at every item" installed while Nixon was president, and then decide what should be done with them now.

From Nixon's 1968 election until mid-1973, the government put $1,156,075 worth of equipment and capital improvements into Nixon's homes at San Clemente, Calif., and Key Biscayne, Fla. Other, larger sums were spent on adjacent offices and administrative facilities.

He said it wouldn't be in the government's interest to dig up $3,000 worth of wiring if the salvage value was only a few dollars. But other items no longer needed and easily removed might be reclaimed.

PICKLES
... end congestion

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Veterans' Hospital will become part of neighboring Royal Jubilee Hospital at Sunday midnight and will be known in future as Memorial Pavilion.

Integration ends a decade of debate over the 270-bed hospital for war veterans and pushes the Jubilee complex close to 1,000 beds, easily the second largest hospital in the province and twice the size of Victoria General.

The federal Veterans' Hospital was built for $1 million and opened in 1947. It would cost about $16 million to build today.

In the first phase of integration Jubilee will shift its day care surgery program to Memorial Pavilion, executive director A. C. Pickles said today.

Day care surgery is where patients are admitted and discharged from hospital the same day they undergo surgery. Jubilee operates the biggest such program in the province, doing 4,155 operations last year, about a quarter of its surgery.

At present day care surgery is handled in a "desperately cramped" second floor ward in the main Jubilee block. The move will allow more time for major operations in Jubilee's operating rooms, Pickles said.

The operating rooms at Veterans' have been modernized, part of multi-million dollar renovations at the federal hospital in recent years.

Hospital re-named Memorial Pavilion

Ottawa has been arranging transfer of its hospitals to the provinces across Canada in recent years. Much of the debate surrounding the shift of Veterans' from federal to provincial jurisdiction has concerned guaranteeing continued care for veterans.

Under the agreement concluded earlier this year, entitled veterans are assured priority care at Memorial Pavilion. But the transfer still means close to 100 beds available for community use.

Dr. C. H. Hemmings, director at Veterans' Hospital, will continue as senior treatment medical officer for the department of veterans' affairs and will be in effect the veterans' "ombudsman," Pickles said.

Integration isn't going to happen overnight, he said, and while it starts officially Monday it will take months of work, understanding and co-operation to achieve.

Jubilee's board of directors gave a lot of thought to a new name for the Veterans' Hospital which would both describe its broader role and mark its historical significance.

The choice of Memorial Pavilion has been endorsed by Pacific Command of the Royal Canadian Legion, he said.

The addition brings total beds at Jubilee, which also operates the Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric care, to about 985 and they cover just about every kind of hospital care.

Beds at Veterans' handle acute care, extended care, intermediate care and personal care patients while EMI has 100 beds for adult psychiatric cases, a 10-bed unit for children and 62 beds for extended care of severely disabled children.

Finlayson Controversy Nearing End

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria will soon write the last chapter in the long-running saga of Finlayson Street, which at times resembled a soap opera complete with angry confrontations across street barricades and undetected explosives.

Rescue Attempt Broken Affair

A two car, head-on collision in View Royal early this morning sent five people to hospital, including a woman who heard the crash and tripped and broke her leg as she ran for help.

Colwood RCMP said Iris O'Connor was in her apartment at 106, 342 Island Highway, when she heard the crash at Old Island Highway and Prince Robert shortly before 1 a.m. She ran outside, fell and broke her leg in two places.

The basic questions were whether Finlayson between Cook and Quadra should be left in its present, accident-prone state, widened to permit safer passage of traffic or closed to traffic entirely.

After heated public opinion brought a hasty end to the city's closure experiment last April, council settled for the compromise of widening the street by two feet on either side.

Council affirmed that policy Tuesday by approving cost estimates totalling $221,850 which cover not only the widening project ($165,850) but also $28,000 for the Cook-Finlayson intersection and another $28,000 for the route extension from Cedar Hill to Doncaster.

The Cedar Hill-Doncaster stretch lies in Saanich but if that municipality agrees to the work going ahead, the city is prepared to foot the bill.

City manager Jim Bramley told council that ultimately Saanich might decide to extend the route through to Shelbourne, in accordance with a 10-year plan which designated Finlayson-North Dairy as an east-west cross-town route.

In that case, he said, Saanich would meet the cost out of its own road budget.

(The part of the route between Cook and Cedar Hill, providing four lanes of traffic, has been completed for nearly a year but closed while the controversy continued.)

The widening between Cook and Quadra involves construction of two 11-foot travelling lanes and one eight-foot parking lane.

One of the biggest cost items will be the relocation of Hydro poles on both sides of the street. The mature trees on the boulevard will not be affected.

City engineer Jim Garnett said today the widening will not be tackled until the Cook-Finlayson intersection has been prepared and the Saanich stretch between Cedar Hill and Doncaster completed.

It's Double Security At Lottery Office

Running the B.C. lottery has the security overtones of a general election with ticket stubs taking the place of ballots.

Lotteries branch staff who moved into new permanent headquarters Thursday have sent one batch of 91,081 stubs back to Western Canada Lottery head office in Winnipeg, and are about to dispatch about that many more employing a double-security system.

Each ticket stub is torn in half by staff working under lotteries branch director John Stewart, who estimates 1.2 million tickets have been sold in B.C. for the first draw Oct. 23.

Half of each stub is placed in a steel box, locked up and shipped to Manitoba, while the other half is placed in a sealed bag and airtight.

When the two shipments are received in Winnipeg they are matched by computer before the drawing.

A lottery spokesman said the method provides reasonable assurance of at least one shipment getting to Winnipeg even if the other is burned or lost in disaster.

Although only about 200,000 ticket sales are confirmed by the actual stubs returned to Victoria lottery branch, there are nearly two million tickets in distribution and another 300,000 yet to be distributed. Value of the known sales is $500,000.

A sales push by the 350 licensed agencies is expected during the next six weeks. Stub must be returned to agencies by Oct. 7 for processing and return to Winnipeg.

Ticket holders face long odds for the $250,000 top prize — one in five million expected to be sold between the four western provinces.

An acupuncture clinic will be operating in Victoria early this fall, Health Minister Dennis Cocke confirmed today.

The minister would not say where the clinic would be located but it will likely be operated out of one of the two major hospitals.

A clinic will also soon be set up at Vancouver General Hospital, he said, but other outlets across the province will not be started immediately.

"Naturally, we have to find capable people to work in these institutions but at least they're off the ground," said Cocke.

All the new clinics will be under strict supervision of the B.C. Medical profession, Cocke said.

The Vancouver acupuncture committee, made up of doctors and members of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, has been working on developing standards for acupuncture treatment for over a year.

"We have a number of people that have not only been to China but have been studying acupuncture locally and have some pretty good ideas," said Cocke.

"I mean they're not the world's leading acupuncturists but... they're highly competent."

The committee is working in the final details of the clinics and those will be announced shortly, he said.

Cocke will be travelling to China with Premier Barrett this fall and will take the opportunity to study acupuncture on a first-hand basis.

Check Clears Marguerite

A special investigation by the ministry of transport has given the Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite a clean bill of health.

The checks which took place Monday and Tuesday on the ship's runs between Victoria and Seattle, were ordered after Ald. Fred Severson of Saanich said the ship was so crowded she was like "a cattle car" the last time he was aboard.

Area marine surveyor Bob Baird said his assistant was "quite happy with the number of passengers" being carried on the Marguerite, which is licensed to carry 2,000 passengers and a 90-man crew.

"He found the maximum passengers ever carried was 1,845," Baird said, "and the average is around 500."

Baird said his department was satisfied that safety equipment and facilities aboard the ship fully justified her licence for 2,000.

Ask the Times

Q. I would like to know when the last bridge was built over "Gorge Water," called Point Ellice bridge — I.M.

A. The present Point Ellice bridge was opened Nov. 30, 1937, after almost six months of construction. It cost $683,000. The bridge site has a long, and on one occasion, tragic history. A rough wooden bridge was thrown across the water at that point in the 1800s. It was replaced in 1885 by a bridge which was to produce Victoria's greatest tragedy. It collapsed under the weight of a crowded streetcar on the May 24 weekend in 1886. Fifty-five people died. That bridge was replaced in 1904, to carry traffic until the present structure opened 15 years ago.

Dolphins May Splash In Old Crystal Pool

Dolphins may splash and gambol where humans once walloped somewhat less gracefully if Victoria city council agrees a consortium's proposal for restoring the old Crystal Garden building as a marine aquarium.

Representatives of the group received some encouraging comments from individual aldermen after making their presentation to council's caucus meeting Tuesday.

But the only commitment given was that the submission would be studied by council's special Crystal Garden committee, along with any other proposals coming from other developers.

Meanwhile, the group — Penthouse Developments Inc. and Colby Marine Ltd. of Victoria, and Hefru Food Service Ltd. of Vancouver — undertook to carry out detailed studies on the project's feasibility and present a more comprehensive proposal to the city within four months.

Terry Smith, vice-president of Penthouse Developments, said the intention was to seek a long-term lease on the property, prompting Ald. Tom Christie to warn that the deal wouldn't "come cheap."

Smith said actual restoration costs could amount to $1 million, and the total cost of the project could exceed $2 million.

Plans were to raise the level of the disused swimming pool some four feet with plexiglass walls, so that the dolphins could be viewed underwater as well as from the surface, and similar viewing opportunities would be provided in other pools and tanks.

Other attractions in the complex would include a public space featuring shopping areas, an arboretum, tropical aviary and "water garden," as well as a seafood restaurant and specialty food shops.

Ald. Sam Bawlf, who earlier suggested the city undertake restoration itself and then consider operation of an arboretum by the commercial sector, was the only member of council openly opposed to the consortium's plans.

He said the group should be asked to show whether there would be an adequate market for their attraction, as he had serious doubts whether Victoria could support three marine complexes.

Mayor Peter Pollen disagreed on the need for such a study, saying the city at present has only "one and a half Sealands" both owned by the same man, and perhaps a little competition would be healthy.

BUCHAN... sets fast pace in championships

CURLY CARL YOUNGEST AND THE BEST

Carl Buchan, 17, member of the sailing Buchans of Seattle, is far ahead in the 10-race series which will decide this year's North America single-handed champion.

He was 23.7 points ahead of second-place holder, Don Trask of San Francisco as the third day of racing began off Esquimalt today.

The youngest sailor in the international event, Buchan, if he continues to hold his position, will pull off his second international championship within weeks.

He beat out 116 other racers at Jericho Sailing Centre on the mainland July 28 to win the Canadian Laser championship. He will be competing in the world Laser championships in Bermuda this fall.

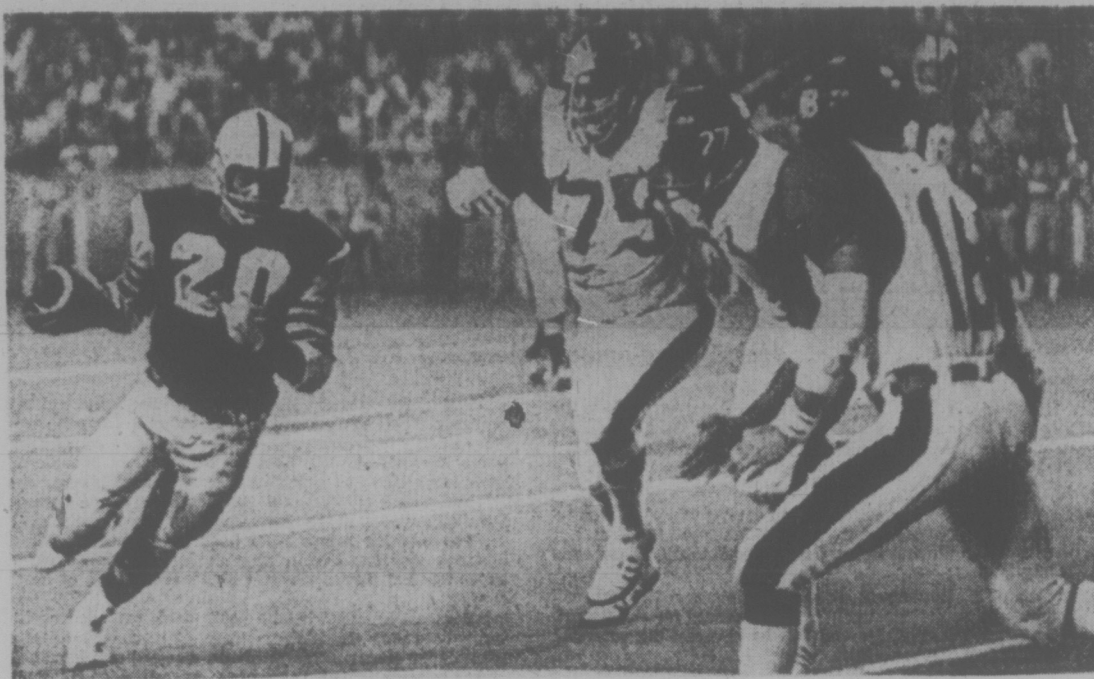

Trask placed second at Jericho, also qualifying to race in the Laser worlds.

Buchan is the son of Swiftsure veteran Bill Buchan, who is alternate helmsman and tactician aboard the 12-metre Intrepid, now cleaning up at pre-America's Cup trials at Newport, Rhode Island.

Rick Kern of Sherman Oaks, Calif., was in third position as racing began today while the only Canadian in the event, Tony Rose of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club was in 10th spot. Standings, on completion of the first five races, using the minimal point Olympic scoring system, were:

Buchan, 11 points; Trask, 34.7; Kern, 44.1; David Patterson of Dallas, Texas, 57; Jeff O'Brien of Warwick, R.I., 58; Randall Swan of Folly Beach, S.C., 58.7; Peter Branning of Miami, 61.7; Mike Hill of Newport, R.I., 64.4; Mark Foster of Corpus Christie, Texas, 67; Rose, 74; Larry Levin of Honolulu, 76; Gary Knapp of Syosset, N.Y., 78.7; Les Chigwin of Stamford, Conn., 86.7; Will Norris of Wauwatosa, Wis., 97; Gary Smith of Arlington, Vrg., 101; Mike Price of Long Island, N.Y., 106, and Brad McCoy of Canton, Ohio, 110.

Ticats' Andy Hopkins (20) faces three hostile Alouette players

Ticats Confuse Als

HAMILTON (CP) — A new offence fooled Montreal long enough Tuesday night to give Hamilton Tiger-Cats an 11-7 win over the Alouettes in an Eastern Football Conference game.

Coach Jerry Williams' new

Power I attack produced its only touchdown in the first seven minutes, but the Hamilton defence remained a mystery to the Alouettes all night.

The Alouettes, who averaged 24 points in their first four outings, did get a second-quarter touchdown from Johnny Rodgers, but spent most of the rest of the game trying to get inside the Hamilton 30-yard line.

"Plain and simple, man," said Hamilton cornerback John Williams. "It was the front four that made the difference."

"When they're behaving that way up front, it makes my job easy, man, easy."

"I'm tremendously pleased," said coach Williams.

"Not with just the front four but with the whole works—all of them on defence."

But if the Ticat defence contained the EFC leaders, it was the kicking of Ian Suter that gave Hamilton the win before a crowd of 28,732.

After converting Andy Hopkins' first-quarter touchdown, he kicked a field goal later in the quarter, then added a single in the second quarter.

His kicking brought his season's points total to 47, moving him into a tie with Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders for the EFC scoring lead.

The Power I had two running backs and two ends lined up behind quarterback Chuck Ealey. The four went in motion to both sides of the field or together in one direction as the play developed.

"It's designed to confuse," said Williams. "It confused enough for us to win the game."

Hopkins carried the ball three times for 17 yards the first time the Ticats showed the Power I.

Ealey threw a 20-yard pass to former Alouette Terry Evanshen to put the ball on the Montreal 34 and Garney Henley took another pass to the 19.

That gave Hopkins another chance to carry the ball and he took it the rest of the way for the touchdown.

Ealey ran 37 yards to the Montreal nine to set up Suter's 18-yard field goal, then threw a 26-yard pass to Henley to set up Suter's 32-yard single.

A Hamilton fumble on a rough play call gave Rogers a chance to score from the seven for Montreal in the second quarter.

Ealey gained 69 yards in nine carries and Hopkins 43 yards. Steve Ferrughelli accounted for 51 of Montreal's 103 yards.

Henley caught three passes for 51 yards from Ealey, who completed seven of 16 passes for 109 yards. Montreal quarterback Jimmy Jones connected on 10 of 17 yards for 103 yards.

Bates Perfect in Tuneup

All three Victoria Bate Construction pitchers combined for a perfect game Tuesday as the host club for the Canadian senior men's softball championship warmed up Tuesday with a 4-0 exhibition win over Royal Oak Sporting Goods of the Stuffy McGinnis League at Central Park.

Stan Kern went the first three innings for Bates and struck out five of the nine batters he faced. Clay Allinotte then went two innings and struck out four of six and Dave Ruthowsky finished up by striking out the side twice in two innings. Bates hurlers allowed no hits or bases on balls.

Harvey Stephenson hit a two-run homer in the first inning.

Home run hitters ruled the diamond Tuesday as Seaboard Construction tripped Century Inn 11-5 in the opening game of the best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League playoff final at Heywood Avenue Park.

All Seaboard runs and three of the five Century runs were scored on homers.

Paul Morrison led off for Seaboard with a three-run blast in the first inning. Brian Greston added a two-run ground-tripper in the third, Bob Reid hammered out a grand slam effort in the fifth and Glen Kilduff finished things off with a two-run homer in the sixth.

Mike Cox gave Century a brief lead with a three-run homer in the first.

NFL Betting Scheme Bared

NEW YORK (AP) — Two reputed bookmakers were indicted Tuesday on charges of conspiring in a $1-million pro football gambling scheme that involved obtaining detailed medical information from the New York Giants team doctor.

District Attorney Richard H. Kuh of Manhattan said the two men sought the information as an edge "to increase their winnings above the bookmaker's customary gross profit of five per cent."

The defendants, Thomas Musto, 64, and Michael Asarita, 47, agreed to confer with Dr. Anthony Pisani, then the National Football League team's physician, throughout last season, said the indictment.

They were particularly interested in the extent and exact nature of injuries suffered by star running back Ron Johnson, defensive back Carl Lockhart and defensive tackle John Mendenhall, Kuh said.

Pisani, who retired at the end of the season, was not named in the indictment. Kuh declined to comment on Pisani's role in the investigation, which lasted more than a year.

Pisani was not available for comment. However, his lawyer, Gregory J. Perrin, issued the following statement:

"Dr. Pisani co-operated fully with the district attorney's office in this investigation and he says involvement arose because someone took advantage of him, someone he has known as a patient and an acquaintance for a number of years."

"He was not involved in any wrongdoing and at no time was he disloyal to the football Giants and the NFL."

A spokesman in the office of Pete Rozelle, NFL Commissioner, said:

"This matter points up the reason for the NFL policy which requires individual clubs to make full public disclosure of the physical condition of their players during the week prior to each game."

On the strike front, Ed Garvey, the executive director of the National Football League Players' Association, said Tuesday in Minneapolis that team owners are apparently committed to break the union.

"The owners have not put any offer on the table," said Garvey, who appeared at a news conference with Minnesota Vikings' player representative Alan Page and Minneapolis lawyer Leonard Lindquist. "The time has come for the owners to do something," said Garvey. "If their answer is to attack our leadership, it'll be a long and difficult season."

Garvey was referring to Philadelphia Eagles' decision Monday to cut player representative Kermit Alexander. "This was another blatant example to discriminate against the union."

"We have the ability to destroy the National Football League," Page said. "I'd hate to see it happen."

Garvey said if team owners didn't respond to the latest NFLPA proposal by Monday, the association would poll its members about leaving their respective training camps at the end of the "cooling off" period. That deadline comes next Wednesday.

Rout by Taiwan Revives Charges

Times News Services
"Break up the Yankees," was the old cry heard around baseball several years ago when New York dominated the American League.

The same cry has gone up again, only this time on the Little League level. Now it's aimed at Taiwan.

The youngsters from the Island of Formosa have dominated Little League baseball to such an extent in the last four years that charges have been made they are a national all-star team and should be barred from the Little League World Series, going on this week in Williamsport, Pa.

National teams aren't allowed in Little League playoffs. They're strictly for league teams that survive area and district playoffs across the U.S., Canada, Europe, Latin America and Asia.

Taiwan showed no signs of weakening Tuesday at Williamsport, bombing New Haven, Conn. 16-0 on a one-hitter by right-hander Lin Wen-Hsiung. He struck out 13 and walked only three in the six-inning rout.

New Haven's only hit was a fourth-inning double by pitcher-shortstop Lorenzo Vincent.

In another game, Tallmadge, Ohio, defeated Athens, Greece, 8-0 as Bob Trauger scattered seven hits for the winners.

Esquimalt-Vic West, representing Canada, played its first game today against Red Bluff, Calif., the western U.S. representative. Win or lose at Williamsport, the Esquimalt-Vic West youngsters will be honored at a welcome-back celebration next Tuesday in Esquimalt. Esquimalt Teamsters, who leave Thursday for Halifax and the Canadian Junior "B" Jucos finals, also will be honored.

The welcome home will include a parade from Victoria to Esquimalt Sports Centre where Esquimalt Mayor Art Young will greet the teams and present them with mementos. Final arrangements remain to be completed.

Cycle Circles Buzz After Sprint Hassle

MONTREAL (CP) — There will be arguments in cycling circles from now until the 1975 world event in Belgium about the outcome of the professional sprint final at this year's championships.

And while no money was at stake here—only gold and silver medals—there's no doubt Peder Pedersen of Denmark will cash in on the professional sprint title he won here Tuesday night in a controversial clash with another first-year pro—John Nicholson of Australia.

Pedersen lost the first heat to Nicholson, but stormed back to take the second from the Australian.

With the series all even and the two running neck-and-neck in the final lap of the three-lap third heat, Pedersen fell—or was pushed, depending on which version was being given by rival camps—and the heat was declared void.

Pedersen limped off for repairs and returned for a re-run of the third heat with his right forearm and thigh covered with heavy bandages. But bandages or not he won the deciding race in a photo-finish and the gold medal that accompanied the victory.

Diminished somewhat by the Pedersen-Nicholson feud, the West German in the amateur team pursuit event. The foursome of Hans Lutz, Peter Vonhof, Guntter Schumacher and Dietrich Thruar, easily disposed of their counterparts from East Germany for their second successive gold medal.

PLUMBERS TAP A TITLE

Pitt and Holt Plumbing completed an impressive season by defeating James Bay Athletic Association 16-11 Tuesday at MacDonald Park to sweep the best-of-three Commercial Men's Softball League playoff final.

Pitt and Holt, which won 15 of its last 16 games, reached the final by sweeping the best-of-three semi-final against Speedway Motors.

James Bay reached the final by beating Ingham Hotel 2-1 in their semi-final.

Oyster River Marina Blessed By Fisheries

Nine long months after the scheduled completion date, federal fisheries has finally released their study assessing the impact a proposed marina access channel and breakwater would have on the fisheries resources of the Oyster River.

Part of the study was predictable and the rest unimpressive. The anticipated part concerns conclusions which "indicate that the shallow subtidal and intertidal portions of the delta of the Oyster River do not provide a unique or highly utilized rearing and feeding habitat for juvenile salmonids as do the embayed estuaries of the Squamish, Nanaimo and Campbell Rivers."

Therefore, a decision has been reached: "Construction of the channel and breakwater as proposed would not have a deleterious effect on the fisheries resources associated with the Oyster River."

And they end with "it is recognized that there are important aesthetic and land use considerations associated with the proposed development."

That's perhaps the understatement of the year. Someone else wasn't too impressed with the long-awaited study on the Pacific Playground plan either.

During the course of a discussion last week in Nanaimo with fisheries biologist George Reid of the fish and wildlife branch, he said he would have rather seen a comparison of the Oyster with the Big Qualicum, which also isn't an embayed estuary.

"I think comparing the Oyster River with the Campbell River is like comparing night and day," Reid added.

Another significant fact, which escaped much mention in the study, concerns the winter runs of steelhead (not to mention sea-run cutthroat trout) which utilize the Oyster.

"They didn't sample during the steelhead season," explained Reid.

A recent branch creel census indicates the lower mile of the Oyster is fished by 90 per cent of the steelhead anglers trying their luck in that particular stream.

"We're concerned from the fisherman's point of view, which has nothing to do with the rearing potential of the estuary."

"I don't think we can withdraw our objection on these grounds," Reid pointed out.

There is no argument from this quarter with the main finding of the study and it appears the development will probably have little or no effect on the runs of spawning salmon.

In fact, when the proposed channel is cut through the foreshore and present access to the marina through the river itself is subsequently blocked off, interference with the runs will probably be reduced.

John Senter, an ecologist with the lands department, agrees.

His department has made (or is expected to make) a decision, based on the fed-fisheries study and other reports, to allow the development to proceed.

"We can't justify denial on biological grounds," said Senter.

And now, the case rests with the Comox-Strathcona regional district, which will have to justify the marina complex on sociological and aesthetic grounds.

That might prove difficult—if not impossible.

Meanwhile, another federal fisheries report accompanying the Oyster River has turned thumbs-down on a marina proposed for the estuary of the Campbell River by the local Indian band.

They suggest the marina shouldn't "be located at the site proposed, and alternate locations with much reduced environmental impact be fully investigated."

It's Our Turn Next on the Volleyball List

By DOUG PEDEEN
Times Sports Editor

... sees potential

If volleyball history repeats itself, the sport will surge toward greater prominence in Canada following the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

However, says Yasutaka Matsudaira, who coached Japan's volleyball teams to gold medals at the Munich Olympics two years ago, the tide of the volleyball revolution has already surged onto the shores of the Americas and Canada could possibly be a contender for a medal in Montreal.

Nearing the end of a continent-hopping trip, on which he has directed volleyball clinics at Rio de Janeiro, Mexico, Toronto, Honolulu and the British Columbia camp in Winfield, Matsudaira was in Victoria for a few hours Wednesday, mainly for a visit with deputy provincial secretary Lawrie Wallace.

Eastern European nations were the first to develop major improvements in volleyball, then the Asian countries became leaders in introducing new techniques, explained the man who is director of public relations for Nippon Kokan, Japan's second-largest steelmaker that is also a shipbuilding company and the major buyer of Canadian coking coals.

"One of the reasons for my visit," said Matsudaira in the office of provincial volleyball coach Vic Lindal, "is that I find great interest in having good contact and observing the improvement of volleyball in America and Canada. You have much potential here for the future with your great new talent."

"The Olympics in Montreal will provide a most important opportunity, because from our history, since the Olympics in Tokyo, volleyball has become a major and strong spectator sport."

Author of five books on volleyball and three others on sports philosophy, Matsudaira said he "was so impressed by the Canadian volleyball movement that I am planning to invite Mr. Lindal to Japan to study techniques and training procedures—and my philosophy of sports."

That was the purpose of the meeting with the deputy provincial secretary, and it appears probable that Lindal will visit Japan next March with Nippon Kokan picking up the tab for all expenses.

Just returned from the Pacific Rim championships in Hawaii, Lindal said that Canadian athletes were just as big, strong and athletic as the Japanese players, but were far behind the Asians in fundamental skills.

"To achieve prominence on volleyball, we must have a much longer playing season," commented Lindal. "Until we have volleyball included as a year-round program in high schools, instead of including it as a part-time recreation, we will be merely perpetuating mediocrity."

"We look on volleyball as an art form. You don't ask a music student to switch from piano to guitar just because the season changes."

In Hawaii, Japanese men's and women's teams finished on top, each with four straight victories in five-team, round-robin competition. Korea (3-1) was second among the men and the U.S. (2-1) was second in the women's section.

Canada's men's squad, which included Victoria athlete Richard Chapple, wound up in a three-way tie for third with a 1-3 record, but lost out for a berth in the four-team playoff through a tie-breaking system.

Shelley Godfrey and Karen Egger of Victoria played with the Canadian women's club, fourth in round-robin play with a 1-3 mark and lesser in a playoff for third place as Hawaii came out on top in a five-game marathon match. Next year, the Pacific Rim championships will be held in British Columbia, probably at Victoria.

Dodger Bats Boom

By The Canadian Press

Los Angeles Dodgers gave Chicago Cubs a merciless pounding Tuesday afternoon but it didn't do the Dodgers any good in baseball's National League West Division pennant race.

After the Dodgers walloped the Cubs 18-8, Cincinnati Reds kept pace with them by whipping Philadelphia Phillies 7-1.

The Dodger barrage included three home runs by Dave Lopes, who had only three others all season, and one apiece by Jimmy Wynn, Steve Garvey and Willie Crawford.

Cincinnati remained 1/2 games behind Los Angeles when Johnny Bench hit his 25th home run of the season, a three-run shot in the third inning, and Joe Morgan cracked his third in two nights.

In Tuesday's other National League games, Atlanta Braves beat St. Louis Cardinals 8-6, San Francisco Giants edged Pittsburgh Pirates 8-7, San Diego Padres blanked Montreal Expos 3-0 and Houston Astros defeated New York Mets 6-2.

Lopes also had a single, double and four RBIs, Garvey had four RBIs, Crawford had three singles in addition to his homer and Ron Cey had a double and three singles for the Dodgers, who ended a six-game losing streak Monday.

Carmen Fanzone belted a grand slam for the Cubs and Rick Stearns also hit his first major league homer.

The Reds' victory gave them a 75-19 mark after 124 games, the identical record they had at the same point last season when they trailed Los Angeles by 1 1/2 games.

Clay Kirby scattered five hits and struck out six, allowing the Phillies only an unearned run in the fourth inning.

Darrell Evans climaxed a four-run second inning with his second two-run homer in two games for the Braves, who wiped out a 2-0 deficit in the bottom of the first when Ralph Garr singled, Marty Perez doubled and Henry Aaron singled.

Despite the setback, the Cards remained 2 1/2 games ahead of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Adanacs Tie Series

COQUITLAM (CP) — Coquitlam Adanacs scored nine goals in the third period to come from behind and defeat Vancouver Burrards, 16-15, and even the Western Lacrosse Association semi-final series at 1-1.

Third game of the best-of-five series will be played at Richmond tonight.

Vancouver led until the final five minutes of the game when Coquitlam picked up three goals within 47 seconds, all while playing shorthanded.

John Allen scored four of the Coquitlam goals while Jim Aitchison added three. Rhys Parsons, Don Cameron and Dennis Nagy scored two each.

for the winners with singles going to Terry Pinder, Dave Durante and Keith Scott.

Bob Salt scored three goals for Vancouver while Bill Rawson, Taki Vohalis, Nick Delmonico, Doug Hayes and Harry Powless scored two each. The other Vancouver goals were scored by Ross McDonald and Paul Joseph.

BRENDA CAMERON

BRENDA, WENDY ADVANCE

OTTAWA — Two Victoria girls, Wendy Barlow and Brenda Cameron, advanced to the quarter-finals in singles play by posting victories Tuesday in the Canadian Closed junior tennis championships at Rideau Lawn Tennis Club.

Miss Cameron defeated Laurie Rope of Ontario 6-1, 6-3 in a 16-and-under match while top-seeded Miss Barlow ousted Kathy Mather of Ontario 6-0, 6-1 in a 14-and-under contest.

Two other Victoria entrants were eliminated as eighth-ranked Diana Dimmer of Ontario topped Nina Bland 6-2, 6-1 and in another 16-and-under match and eighth-seeded Steve Rogul of Ontario defeated Glen Bradshaw 6-0, 6-3 in an 18-and-under boys' match.

Rebound by Spiers Harpoons British Columbia's Cup Hopes

WINNIPEG (CP) — There's no doubt in the minds of all members of Manitoba's Willingdon Cup golf team that it was rookie Gavin Spiers who provided the incentive Tuesday that produced the province's first victory in inter-provincial team championships since 1921.

Spiers fired an 82 Monday in his first-ever Willingdon Cup round but rebounded strongly Tuesday shooting a two-over-par 73 despite steady rain and gusty winds.

Much the same type of weather is forecast for most of today when a field of 142 golfers tee off in the opening round of the 72-hole Canadian amateur championship, also being held at the Niakwa Country Club.

"That was great inspiration," team-mate Barry McKenzie, who shot a one-over-par 72 said of Spiers' round.

That took the pressure off, especially the way I played the front nine," said Steve Bannatyne, who rallied from a six-over-par 42 on the front nine to finish with a 75.

"At 42 you consider yourself out of it, they throw your score away, you're presumed dead on arrival. But when I saw Gavin's score I figured I had to try and come back. I wanted to shoot under par on the back nine to provide insurance in case Barry or Ted (Homenuik) ran into trouble."

It all paid off in Manitoba's four-shot victory over British Columbia and their first ever Willingdon Cup win. The cup was not up for grabs when Manitoba won the Canadian title in 1921.

With only the three lowest scores counting each day, the Manitoba team combined for a 36-hole score of 438, 12 over par on the 6,154-yard Niakwa course.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby emerged the low individual medalist, shooting a two-under-par 71 for a two-day score of 142, but it wasn't enough to pull British Columbia to its fourth consecutive cup victory.

Nelford was three shots ahead of Bannatyne and Quebec's Pierre Archambault in the race for individual honors.

British Columbia finished with a 422 total, leading Ontario by three shots as provincial champion Bob Mitchell of Richmond fired a 75 to wind up at 149, seven strokes behind Nelford.

Big Cec Ferguson of Victoria, the Vancouver Island Open champion, barded his second successive 76 for 152 and Vancouver veteran Johnny Russell skidded to 81 for a two-round tally of 156.

While the other members of the team were giving Spiers credit, he said the guys "are all being too kind."

"I felt so bad after Monday that I had to do something today."

Spiers did that as he overcame the pouring rain and high winds that plagued golfers by "keeping the ball straight down the fairways and hitting some good putts."

McKenzie's 72 was termed a "super round" by his playing partner, Ken Doig of Seaforth, Ont., who had a 76.

McKenzie, appearing in his 11th cup competition, hit 14 greens and started with birdies on the opening two holes.

British Columbia made a brief run at the cup with Nelford leading the way. But Bob Mitchell of Richmond ran into bogey problems on the back nine and their challenge died quickly.

Wakeham Trails By Three Shots

SALEM, Ore. — Bill Wakeham the professional at Cowican Golf Club near Duncan, fired a par 72 Tuesday to go with his opening-round 71 to gain a tie for seventh place going into the final 36 holes of the $25,000 Northwest Open tournament.

Wakeham trails co-leaders Bob Burton of Everett, Tim Berg of Portland and Jeff McRae of Vancouver, Wash., by three strokes with his 143 total.

Sandy Remains

NORTH VANCOUVER — Sandy Harper of Nanaimo and Jim Goddard of North Vancouver are the only two Canadian players remaining in the running for the title in the Pacific Northwest Golf Association junior championship.

Favorite for the championship as 16 survivors moved into today's round of match play is Chris Mitchell of Downriver, Wash.

Wings Clinch Top Spot

Philadelphia Wings, paced by brothers Larry and Terry Lloyd, clinched first place in the National Lacrosse League with a 20-11 win Tuesday night over Rochester Griffins.

Wings now have 50 points, nine more than the Griffins, who have three games remaining in the 40-game schedule. Maryland Arrows are goals for Rochester and Rick Bisson got two.

The Wings have attracted 137,369 fans for 17 home games this season — best in the league.

Before 893 fans in Toronto, Ryan Wilfong scored four goals and Bill Langley picked up two goals and four assists to lead the Tomahawks.

For Montreal, Serge Lusselle scored three goals, while Rob McCarthy and Jim Lynch had two each.

Henri Returning For 20th Season

He is one of four players to score two Cup-winning goals.

Perkins Pitches Movers to Lead

Mark Perkins struck out nine batters, yielded three hits and allowed only one base-on-balls while pitching Greaves Movers to an 8-2 win over Farmer Construction and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League playoff final Tuesday at Lambrick Park.

The series continues tonight and Thursday with games at 6:15 in the same park.

Dave Morgan and Terry Karpiuk supplied Greaves with power at the plate, each driving in three runs.

Morgan had three singles and Karpiuk tagged a home run and a double.

Karpiuk's double in the seventh inning helped Greaves break open the tight game with five runs.

James Bay Wins Three Tour Games

Indian Protest Signals Future Demonstrations

CALGARY (CP) — About 25 singing, chanting treaty Indians took over the department of Indian affairs office here for 30 minutes Tuesday to protest what they said was the refusal by the federal government to finance an urban self-help agency.

Urban Calling Last, co-ordinator of the Calgary Urban Treaty Indian Alliance (CUTIA) which organized the demonstration, warned that more demonstrations will follow and people "will be hurt" if the group's $260,000, two-year grant is not approved.

There was no violence by the Indians, who sat in the reception area of the office, playing a ceremonial drum and chanting.

An official of the department office said the office knew the demonstration was to take place, and plans had been made to lock up the office at 2 p.m., the time planned for the demonstration.

Calling Last said the grant was approved by officials in the department of Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien rejected it.

"This is not an occupation,"

Fish Died Naturally

CALGARY (CP) — Natural causes have been cited by provincial biologists in the death of hundreds of whitefish in McGregor Lake reservoir 80 miles southeast of Calgary.

The fish were found floating belly-up on the banks of the lake about three weeks ago after an unusually hot spell during July. Perch and pike were not affected.

Calling Last told reporters. "This is a demonstration against the minister of Indian Affairs trying to take away our treaty rights."

"For the past year the minister has been saying that once an Indian steps off the reserve he no longer has any treaty rights, that the government is not responsible for him."

"This position was taken without consultation among the Indian leaders. This is the method he has taken to ruthlessly take away our native rights."

The alliance was formed 20 months ago to assist treaty Indians who moved to the city from reserves.

It received an initial start-up grant from the federal government and a letter from the department earlier this year indicated that it would receive the two-year grant and would be a pilot project for other Indian urban self-help centres.

Calling Last said the peaceful demonstration was "a warning of what will come if they don't produce."

"We aren't the only ones in the country who face this. The groups in Winnipeg, Saskatchewan, and Edmonton and Lethbridge plan to hold similar demonstrations."

ROCK FANS ANIMALS —THEATRE MANAGER

EDMONTON (CP) — The Jubilee Auditorium may be closed to rock groups because of problems with cigarette smoking and the lighting of matches, in a lute to rock acts, says Ron Wigmore, hall manager.

Rock fans disregard fire regulations and "animals like that can go back to the stockyards in the (Edmonton) Gardens where they belong," said Wigmore.

He said he would be "observing" the next few scheduled rock concerts to determine whether or not to curtail them in the building.

"If it becomes apparent there is no way they are going to abide by what I feel to be perfectly reasonable regulations, then I just won't book them," he said. Wigmore added that he resented the theatre managers being called "the bad red necks" by rock fans.

Ottawa Said Stalling

EDMONTON (CP) — A Calgary biologist who received a $1,500 award Tuesday for a program to preserve representative bits of the Arctic landscape says the federal government is stalling implementation of the scheme.

Dr. Val Geist, co-chairman of a group of scientists who suggested and surveyed nearly 200 sites in the Arctic, said the government could enable adoption of the program simply by passing an Arctic ecological reserves act.

But, said the scientist after receiving the White Owl Conservation Award, Ottawa has insisted that every proposed reserve be studied and supported by all persons and interests affected.

Such a requirement could kill the program because of the high cost of getting around in the Arctic, said Dr. Geist.

Cuban Links Spread

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — Panama has decided to restore diplomatic ties with Cuba, the third Latin American nation to do so.

The Panamanian National Legislation Council voted unanimously Tuesday to renew the relations broken in 1962.

There are no valid reasons for continuing the isolation of Cuba," said Foreign Minister Juan Antonio Tack.

Panama joins Argentina and Peru in renewing ties with Castro's government.

The three countries defected from a group of Western Hemisphere countries that followed a 1962 Organization of American States recommendation to sever ties after Cuba was found guilty of subversive acts in Venezuela.

Cuba has backed Panama's position for total control of the Panama Canal and has offered to buy the Panamanian bananas that the U.S. United Brands Co. refused to export.

Singer Takes Charge of Own Career

TORONTO (CP) — There is more than just plain gumption involved in Michal Hasek's desire to turn out the best in Canadian folk-rock music. Not only has the Toronto singer a strong faith in his own potential, he is determined to control it himself and see it developed to the fullest.

In one year, this highly personalized attitude has led to the formation of the record label Naja and the release of Hasek's first album, entitled simply Michal Hasek. Both arose, to a major extent, through the efforts of the singer himself. A second album is in the works, with a tentative fall release.

Just back from an engagement in Boston, Hasek said in an interview that when he became interested in recording his material about two years ago, he got "quite a few positive reactions" from several record companies.

"But they wanted my soul, not just my music. They wanted to sign me up for many years and they wanted control over my songs," he said.

Hasek said these companies estimate one in 10 albums recorded will sell, adding that in both Canada and the United States he has encountered performers with contracts whose master tracks sit in cans with no promise of a market.

"I was frightened of that happening to me. If I spend two years working on something and find it's going to stay in the can, it's not very good for my state of mind."

Confident in his potential and not willing to chance sending his product to the ranks of the non-movers, Hasek scoured his own backlog and cut the album himself. With the help of friends, both technicians and musicians, he entered Toronto's Meniscus studios last year to begin recording his fresh and varied folk-rock sound. Eight of the 10 selections on the album are originals.

Hasek, who sang in a church choir as a youngster and took vocal training in high school, has a rich, proficient style, at times resembling the mellow, laid-back sound of Neil Diamond, at times the deep resonant sound of Kristofferson.

His compositions on the album—namely Natural Man, You Lighten My Load and Song to the Country—show promise.

Hasek had 1,000 copies of the newly-recorded album pressed to begin his promotion campaign, taking them to news writers, record outlets and radio stations. One major Toronto retailer bought 30 copies on speculation, and two days later was replenishing his depleted stock.

Six months and almost 1,000 sales later, A and M records picked up on the young self-made artist, signing him to a contract for national distribution.

He chose to keep his own label, he said, adding with a grin that Naja—the Navajo Indian word for "luck"—has brought him just that.

Black In Race

CHICAGO (AP) — Lawyer Duke McNeil announced Tuesday his candidacy for mayor in 1975, becoming the first black to mount more than a token drive for the Chicago office. At a news conference, McNeil urged Mayor Richard Daley to "step aside and open it up to the best qualified man." Daley has not returned to city hall since he suffered a stroke in May.

The effort needed to produce his own talent—from promoting to financing—can be trying, he said, but it is more profitable and much more satisfying in the long run.

The last day an artist will make on his canvas is his signature. Michal Hasek's scrawl on the corner of the album's back cover was the final touch to five months of work, and the singer's own personal seal of approval.

Baptism On Steps Of Locked Catholic Church

MARLBORO, Mass. — A baby denied baptism because of his mother's views on abortion was given the secret rite Tuesday on the steps of a locked Roman Catholic Church.

Rev. Joseph O'Rourke of New York, who defied his church superiors and splashed holy water on three-month-old Nathaniel Morreale, said it was "one of the greatest celebrations of life I've ever been to."

Local church officials with the backing of Cardinal Humberto Medeiros had refused to perform the baptism.

They refused to allow O'Rourke, 36, to use the Church of the Immaculate Conception itself.

Rev. Joseph Talbot, O'Rourke's superior in the New York province of the Jesuit order, said the action "was expressly forbidden" by O'Rourke's immediate superior, Rev. Frederick O'Connor.

"We haven't even begun to discuss possible disciplinary action," Talbot said. He said the baptism was a violation of the Jesuit vow of obedience.

The pastor of Immaculate Conception and other priests of the parish issued a statement Tuesday saying the ceremony would not be officially recognized by the Church.

The statement said O'Rourke is a member of a group that supports women's right to have abortion, and this is "perilously close to heresy."

The baptismal ceremony took place shortly after noon Tuesday in front of the 100-year-old church, with more than 250 opponents and proponents of abortion rights looking on.

Nathaniel at first slept through the ceremony, but later awakened, smiled and made faces at the crowd. At one point he gave out a very visible yawn.

When the baptism was over, the jeers began again and cries of "baby-killer" and "you kill the innocent" came from the crowd.

Most of the comments were aimed at William Baird, an advocate of individual freedom of choice on birth control and abortion who participated in the ceremonies.

Now Suspect Wants To Pay for Funeral

VIVE LA DIFFERENCE!
... IF THEY KNOW

NIORT, France (Reuters) — The French army wants to put pretty 18-year-old Myriam Naud in marching boots because the law says she is a male.

Two policemen armed with military service papers came knocking at the door of her home here where she lives with her parents and six brothers and sisters.

They said that despite her name, she was listed as a male in birth records, and as such was obliged to register for one year's service, like any other young Frenchman.

Myriam's father must go to court to make sure his daughter's sex is permanently changed in local records.

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich.

The lawyer for the man charged in the slaying of a 12-year-old newspaper girl says his client wants to pay for the girl's funeral.

Gerald Shernan said Rudolph Acosta, 24, also wants to pay the hospital bills of the girl's father, who was seriously injured when he went to his daughter's aid.

Acosta is reported to have thought the girl was a "hit man" who had come to kill him in a drug-related family feud.

LAS VEGAS — A motion by comedian Redd Foxx for a summary judgment in his divorce case has been denied by a judge.

Judge Keith Hayes gave no reason as he denied the request by Foxx for a divorce now and property settlement later.

Foxx, star of the Sanford and Son television series, testified that he and his wife, Betty Jean, are incompatible.

HOUSTON — William Daniel (Deacon) Jones, 58, once a member of the infamous Bonnie and Clyde gang, was shot to death Tuesday during a quarrel over a woman. Once a driver for the Bonnie Parker-Clyde Barrow gang, Jones served a six-year sentence for taking part in a 1934 murder of a Fort Worth deputy sheriff.

VANCOUVER — Brenda Hines, an 18-year-old grey-eyed blonde from Squamish, was named Miss Pacific National Exhibition for 1974 Tuesday. Brenda, a high school graduate who will enter the B.C. Institute of Technology this fall, plans to become an X-ray technician.

LIMA, Peru — The death of a Texan near Jorge Chavez International Airport Tuesday occurred because a plastic bag of cocaine burst inside his digestive system, police said.

Curtis Melvin Carnes, 26, Austin, Tex., swallowed 10 small plastic bags containing about 12 ounces of cocaine, intending to smuggle the cocaine from Bolivia to the United States, police said.

His stomach acids dissolved the plastic on the flight from La Paz to Lima and the heavy dose of drugs sent him into convulsions.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. — Former premier Joseph Smallwood says he will announce shortly before the provincial Liberal leadership convention Oct. 25 whether he will be a candidate. Earlier, in an interview last week Mr. Smallwood said he wants to regain the party leadership and is convinced the Liberals could return to office "with me as leader."

Swimmer Angela Dives Into Controversy

Times News Services
TORONTO — Controversy arose Tuesday over 14-year-old Angela Kondrak's abortive attempt to become the youngest person to swim 32 miles of Lake Ontario.

Angela went home after recuperating overnight in Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children after her gruelling 24-hour ordeal in the water.

"She's feeling well and eating well, like a young horse," said hospital administrator Ken Rowe, "but she really needs to rest."

Newspapers criticized her handlers for urging her to the point of exhaustion, and a Harbor Commission source said Toronto alderman Reid Scott had the jurisdiction to pull her out of the water much sooner.

Scott, however, said Angela's coach, Art Dufresne, "threatened to sue me" if he ordered the swim ended. "And you know, I think he could have," Scott said. "After all, they weren't doing anything illegal."

Dufresne claimed Tuesday that Angela didn't want to be pulled out of the water.

"Yes, she did want to go on and she didn't like being pulled out of the water," said Art Dufresne.

Angela had been promised more than $12,000 in cash and a number of other prizes, including an new car, if she could finish the swim.

Some of the major donors said they will give her the money and prizes even though she did not finish.

She received at least three $1,000 gifts, one of them from First World War veteran, 81-year-old Carl Emsley, who said he admired her spunk and "that's worth more than a completed swim."

WALKING TALL HERO KILLED

SELMER, Tenn. (UPI) — Buford Pusser (left), the crime-busting sheriff made famous by the movie Walking Tall, was killed today in a flaming traffic accident.

His death came less than 24 hours after he signed to star in a sequel to the smash hit about his battles against gambling, moonshining and prostitution in McNairy County, Tenn.

Pusser, 36, died when his sports car careened off Highway 64, crashed into an embankment and burst into flames. There was no sign of foul play.

There had been seven attempts on Pusser's life while he served as sheriff. One of them killed his wife and almost killed him. Walking Tall ended with Pusser lying in a hospital bed, half his face shot away by .30-calibre pistol bullets.

Bing Crosby productions had announced in Memphis Tuesday, with Pusser at the news conference, that it would soon begin filming Buford near the area of honky tonks where he became a legend. The movie was to take up where Walking Tall left off.

A Life or Death Choice for Man

Times News Services
BUCHAREST — The United States Tuesday urged more than 130 nations attending the United Nations World Population Conference here to set up national targets aimed at slowing down uncontrolled population growth.

Caspar Heinberger, U.S. secretary of health, education and welfare, proposed that the conference include such a provision in its final document.

The objective of the U.S. proposal is to put brakes on the current explosion in man's numbers by reducing the average size of family by the end of the century.

World food reserves have been cut down "to about one month's supply," he said, and predictions of population catastrophe if mankind continues to increase at the current rate give cause "not only for grave concern, but even more important for specific action in family planning and increasing the world's food supply."

The U.S. delegation, he said, believes that the conference's final document should be the beginning of a serious effort by all countries to consider concrete means to resolve the population crisis.

"The choice may make the difference between a decent life or early death for hundreds of millions of the next generation and even greater numbers in the following generation," he said.

The Soviet Union countered that industrial countries are using the world population issue as a smokescreen to hide their imperial designs.

Imperialism — not lack of birth control — is "the main obstacle in the progress of developing nations," the chief Soviet delegate told the conference.

China, the world's most-populated country, does not agree with those who say man is doomed to over-breed himself into extinction.

"China is full of optimism for the future of mankind," Chinese delegate Hsu Shou-yen said.

The Indian delegate, who reminded the audience that his country contained 14 per cent of the world's total population urged industrialized nations to take a "searching look at their own economies" and to reverse "the headlong flight toward limitless consumerism."

Canada's delegate to the conference pledged expertise and money from Canada for family-planning programs in individual developing countries.

Aware of mounting resentment among some poor countries over supposed resources wastefulness in Canada, environment Minister Jeanne Sauvé said developed countries "should examine their production and consumption activities with a view to promoting efficient patterns of utilization."

Meantime, Rafael Salas, executive director of the UN fund for population activities, called for $500 million in contributions for the period 1974-77. "The fund operates about 900 projects in 90 developing countries, concentrating particularly on 16 nations which have signed long-term agreements."

NANAIMO — Camper truck drivers will compete here Saturday in an event designed to foster safe handling of the vehicles.

Sponsored by two Nanaimo firms, the event is open to all camper-trucks up to three-quarter ton with a maximum of nine-foot campers.

The competition involves driving the vehicles over a quarter-mile route and performing certain manoeuvres. It is designed to provide conditions that camper drivers might expect to meet on and off main highways.

The event will be held at Grandview Bowl during the intermission in the regular Saturday night stock car racing program.

MOTHER GOES INTO HIDING AFTER THREAT FROM GANG

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A north Philadelphia mother of seven, who has lost one son in street-gang violence was in hiding today after fatally stabbing a 16-year-old youth to protect another son.

Police said Mrs. Bernice Rawls, 38, stabbed Curtis Jackson to death with a hunting knife Monday night as Jackson and two other known gang members chased her son, Joseph, 15, into the Rawls' home.

Mrs. Rawls, whose son, Vincent, 13, died in a gang stabbing in 1972, was forced to leave her home Tuesday and go into hiding after being threatened by a gang member.

"One of the dead boy's friends said he was coming back to kill us all and burn our house down," said Mrs. Rawls. "I've just got to find a new place, but don't know how I'm going to afford it."

Mrs. Rawls receives $234 a month in welfare assistance.

Police said the Monday night stabbing occurred as Mrs. Rawls and a neighbor sat on the front stoop. They saw a group of 10 boys chasing her son and her brother, Kenneth Griffin, 16.

She told officers that three of the boys pushed past her into her living room, and when they refused to leave following a shoving match, she got the knife from the kitchen and thrust it into Jackson's stomach. Jackson, armed with a pocket knife, died a short time later.

"All I could see was my son's body lying in a pool of blood," said Mrs. Rawls, recalling the 1972 gang slaying. "All I was trying to do was to protect my son and brother."

Gang related violence has claimed more than 20 lives in the city this year and more than 40 in each of the past two years.

Muskoxen Starving

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — There is evidence of widespread starvation among the Arctic's muskoxen, Paul Kwatorowsky, superintendent of game for the Northwest Territories, said Tuesday.

Kwatorowsky, who predicted the starvation last October after the number of shaggy-coated beasts had increased sharply, said about 100 muskox corpses had been found from Ellsmere Island to the Bathurst area.

Current evidence of starvation is not a threat to the species, he added.

"There will always be muskoxen for the next two or three hundred years because if they die off it gives the vegetation a chance to come back. It's an endless cycle," he continued.

"I have only one regret. We didn't allow the Eskimos to kill the animals before they starved. Why should we prohibit Eskimos from shooting muskoxen that are going to die anyway?"

Island Man Presumed Drowned

CAMPBELL RIVER — A Campbell River commercial fisherman is missing and presumed drowned following an accident Tuesday in Deepwater Bay, 10 miles north of here.

RCMP said Gordon James Chickite, 19, was in a skiff that overturned, sending him and a companion, Robbie Vrabie, of Prince Rupert, into the water.

Vrabie climbed on the skiff and was later rescued.

The two men were taking a fish line to shore from a large fishing boat when the mishap occurred.

Broke, Corrupt Bangladesh Resembles Bottomless Pit

Manchester Guardian
Dacca — The floods in Bangladesh are not now expected to lead to a major famine this autumn. The water is going down in most rivers. Food stocks are enough to keep some kind of distribution going for three months, by which time the first shipments of emergency aid will have arrived.

A good portion of the autumn rice crop can still be planted if the water continues to recede, and, barring fresh catastrophes, the exceptional moisture in the ground could produce a record winter crop.

The real crisis is not the flood itself but the fact that Bangladesh has run out of money. And unlike other debtor countries, it has nothing to pawn. It used to have vast invisible credit in international goodwill, but this form of credit had ceased to be sufficient well before the floods. World inflation, especially in oil prices but also in the cost of other essential imports from cement to food grains, had made nonsense of the Bangladesh foreign exchange budget. In particular, it made nonsense of Dacca's brave effort to pay for nearly half its food imports in hard cash.

Before the floods, there was an annual gap of more than 2 million tons between food grain production and anticipated consumption. The floods have now increased this to about 3 million. Each million tons of wheat costs $240 million. Foreign exchange reserves are what an economic expert here has called "a negative quantity." Even before the floods this financial crisis was bringing the economy to a halt, with exports held up because there was no money to pay for essential raw materials and spare parts.

World Will Let Them Sink

For the short term, the gaps will no doubt be filled. Drifts of emergency aid are now being committed — $4 million from the United States, 30,000 tons of wheat from West Germany, and so on. As these announcements come in, it is never quite clear if the money or the wheat represents new commitments of timely restatements of old ones. What is clear is that this only amounts to stopgap, hand-to-mouth assistance.

What of the long term? One of the leading foreign experts on the aid picture, when asked "In the last resort is the world really going to let Bangladesh sink?" answered "Frankly, yes."

The reasons are complex. The same economic blizzard that blows through Bangladesh also blows in New York, London and Frankfurt. After two and a half years, Bangladesh presents a different image. Corruption, inefficiency and the sheer hopelessness of its predicament have made it look like a bottomless pit.

How much can be blamed on Bangladesh? Nowhere is it more difficult for foreigners to maintain a workable perspective. The Intercontinental Hotel here is full all the time with foreign experts, relief workers, diplomats and journalists — from Soviet helicopter pilots to Irish priests. Varying degrees of despair overtakes each and every one of them.

It is not so much the corruption — though that is hard enough to take, when medicines and food donated from abroad are found on sale at inflated prices in markets, and the known culprits go free because the prime minister is, too kind-hearted to his loyal supporters. What appalls foreigners is the absence of a viable administration. Even when aid is available, projects for its disbursement are not prepared and the money sits idly in banks. Many foreigners and Bangalis openly express the view that Bangladesh has been spoiled by too much aid.

Picture Worse Before

For correcting this perspective nobody can be more persuasive than Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman himself. "What did we have here in Dacca?" he asked at one of his "tea parties" for the press on Saturday. "We had no administration at all." Dacca had not even a proper provincial government — it was no more than a municipality. We had to start everything from scratch — start government departments, find money, foreign exchange, build bridges.

He argued that Bangladesh had been an exploited backwater throughout British and Pakistani times. "At least in British times we were kept in touch with India, our natural economic neighbor. The British kept the rivers dredged because they needed to export their jute to Calcutta. In Pakistani times we were cut off from India. So nothing could be done about flood control because India is where our rivers come from."

Before any of the dreams can come true something will have to be done about the lack of money to pay for imports. Stopgap aid can only plug a small part of the gap. A large part of the aid will remain unplugged and as a result people will have to eat less.

Food consumption calculations and poor population estimates provide a double challenge for Sheikh Mujib, his corrupt and ramshackle party and his tired, harassed administration. As soon as the waters recede, seeds and fertilizers will have to be rushed to the farmers for planting the autumn rice — accompanied by credit to pay for them. This operation cannot be allowed to be spoiled by the usual jobbery and Mujib knows it.

The deeper challenge is learning to live with less aid. If smuggling of rice into India could be stopped, and if surplus rice could be bought from farmers at controlled prices and fairly distributed, the need for imports could almost be eliminated at least in a year of good harvests. But that would be a revolution in itself.

Swedish Saab Auto To Sell in Canada

NYKOEPIG. Sweden (UPI) — Saab-Scania, the Swedish automotive and aeronautical manufacturer, announced today it was entering the Canadian market by selling Saab cars through the distributorship of Scancar Ltd., of Toronto.

An announcement by Saab said the selling of its cars in Canada will begin by the end of autumn.

"Canada has long been an interesting market for us," said Sten Wennlo, marketing chief of Saab's automobile division. "The climate in Canada is much like that of Scandinavia and Saab cars are well equipped for the Canadian climate."

Wennlo said even after last winter's energy crisis Canadian auto sales have shown a rise. "Imported cars are playing a large role and account for about 20 per cent of total sales," he said.

"Behind our decision to enter the Canadian market lies also the reliability of Swedish cars in Canada," Wennlo said. "Before we had service possibilities in Canada, customers would have to go over the border to the United States to buy a Saab."

Saab-Scania produces several models of Saab cars, including a two-stroke model. It also manufactures the Saab J-37 Viggen all-weather fighter interceptor — the backbone of Sweden's air defence system.

Philippine Floods Take 67 Lives

MANILA (AP) — With at least eight towns of central Luzon still under water, the Philippine Red Cross said today the death toll from a week of flooding has risen to 67.

Red Cross Secretary-General Loreto Paras Sulit said 20 persons drowned Tuesday in Pangasinan province, a major rice-growing area.

Mrs. Sulit said the floodwaters are receding slowly in the Manila area, and conditions are improving in most parts of fertile central Luzon to the north. But she said eight towns about 40 miles northwest of Manila are still flooded and in some places the water is 15 feet deep.

LONG TREK for two Pismo Beach, Calif., men is half over. Ted Easter, 68, and his nephew, Leroy Hill, 52, left home May 1 on their 10-speed cycles for 5,800-mile trip to Calgary Stampede and points north. This week they were in Prince George, making between 30 and 70 miles a day and expecting to be home by Oct. 1.

ICE HALTS SUPPLIES FOR 8 ARCTIC TOWNS

EDMONTON (CP) — Ice along the central Arctic coastline is hampering efforts to deliver supplies to eight isolated communities before freeze-up officials of the Northern Transportation Co. Ltd. said Tuesday.

The company said it has 10,000 tons of freight backed up at Tuktoyaktuk, N.W.T., because of the ice and has asked for the assistance of a United States Coast Guard icebreaker. There is no Canadian icebreaker available.

An estimated 2,300 Eskimos and a handful of civil servants and businessmen are dependent on the sea lift for such things as fuel oil, gasoline, food, construction materials, and personal essentials. The communities — Paulatuk, Holman Island, Coppermine, Bathurst Inlet, Bay Chimo, Cambridge Bay, Gjoa Haven, and Spence Bay fear that the freeze-up, six to eight weeks off, could make deliveries by sea impossible.

Two weeks of continuous wind have pushed ice from the Beaufort Sea into bays along the coast where one of the coolest summers on record is preventing it from melting.

"The more it blows, the tighter it packs," said Capt. Doug Thomas, the transportation firm's Arctic supervisor in Tuktoyaktuk.

"The ice is really piling up in Franklin Bay and it is packed in very tight under tremendous pressure."

"Generally it's one year (thin) ice but we've started getting some multi-year ice."

Bruce Hunter, a company spokesman in Edmonton, said there will still be time to service the communities if the weather moderates.

Lena Pederson, a Greenland-born Eskimo who sits on the territorial council, said the concept of a sea lift is outdated and should be replaced by aircraft deliveries of supplies, which she says are more reliable.

Tuna Cannery Face Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Western Fishboat Owners Association and four tuna boat owners filed suit in federal court Tuesday, accusing five major tuna fishermen of violating anti-trust laws.

The class action by the 600-member association, based in San Diego, says the firms conspired to restrain trade unreasonably and to monopolize the purchase of tuna.

Named as defendants were Castle and Cooke Inc., which packs under the Bumble Bee label; Westgate-California Foods, which uses Breast of Chicken, Carnation, Priority and Peacock labels; Star-Kist Foods; H. J. Heinz, Star-Kist's parent corporation, and Ralston Purina Inc., which owns Van Camp Seafoods and markets tuna under Chicken-of-the-Sea labels.

The association members have an average yearly catch of 20,000 to 25,000 tons of albacore, 20 per cent of the annual worldwide catch. They bring in about 65 to 70 per cent of the tuna caught off the North American coast.

The suit says the defendants engaged in "extensive and continuing series of acquisitions and consolidations with actual or potential competitors," which gave them a monopoly in buying tuna on the West Coast.

N-Plant Danger 1 in 3 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new government-sponsored study concludes that nuclear power plants pose less risk to the public than hurricanes, tornadoes or lightning.

The probability of death from a nuclear reactor accident for persons within 20 miles of an atomic power plant is one chance in 300 million per year, according to investigation made public Tuesday.

In comparison, the study said the per year risk of death from a severe storm is one in 2.5 million, from lightning one in two million, from air travel one in 100,000, from fires one in 25,000, from falls one in 10,000 and from motor vehicle accidents one in 4,000.

"It seems to me that the nuclear industry stands out very favorably indeed," said Dixy Lee Ray, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission which sponsored the $3 million study directed by Norman C. Rasmussen, professor of nuclear engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"While there are some in the public sector who will feel that the likelihood of occurrence of nuclear power plant accidents should be made essentially zero, neither nuclear accidents nor non-nuclear accidents of any kind can have zero probability," the draft said. "We do not now, and never have, lived in a risk-free world."

The fact is that nuclear accident probabilities are so low that they are insignificant compared to the over-all risks due to other man-made and natural risks.

The major risk involved with a nuclear power plant is the release of large amounts of radioactive material due to a string of failures that would lead to the melting of the reactor's uranium fuel. Rasmussen emphasized that it is impossible for a power plant reactor to explode like an atomic bomb because of the difference in fuel.

The study considered the current generation of power reactors and not the breeder type that are expected to begin operation in the mid 1980s.

Cyprus Frustration Strains Canadians

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian troops patrolling the refugee-flooded ravines and mountains south of this capital say fleeing Greek-Cypriots have spat at their jeeps furiously shouting: "Why didn't you stop the Turks?"

"What can we say to them?" asked one sergeant coming in from a patrol in the wake of the successful Turkish offensive to capture the northern portion of the island.

"We're just as frustrated as they are."

"We try to calm them down, but National Guard guys in the refugee camps tell them they've been sold out by the UN and the United States."

The peacekeepers are among those now feeling the bitter Greek-Cypriot resentment which led Monday to the mob assassination of U.S. envoy Rodger Davies.

UN sources say that resentment will continue to foster an explosive atmosphere on this war-battered island for months to come.

"None of the Greek-Cyps seem to remember that the situation used to be just the opposite when they were on top," said one UN spokesman with the peacekeeping contingent.

When the haze of battle cleared slightly following the Turkish ceasefire last Friday, the general feeling among the UN hierarchy here was that fighting between the two ancient enemies would continue sporadically.

But there was agreement that it would take on the form of isolated guerilla warfare; that the days of all-out battles were over.

The Turks had what they set out to achieve — control over the northern third of the island and that region's citrus fruit, mine and tourist resources.

Though smaller than the Greek-Cypriot portion, the Turkish area makes up about four-fifths of the island's economic base.

Future stability on Cyprus, however, appears to hinge on two highly-unpredictable factors:

One is whether Greek-Cypriot resentment over the pride-crushing Turkish victory will cool enough to allow a negotiated settlement of new dividing lines between the two communities.

The other is whether the Turkish command will be able to restrain its soldiers from moving even further south and taking more of the island.

"Right now, the island is theirs if they want it," said one veteran peacekeeper.

"The Greeks have nothing left to stop them with."

Though the Turkish leadership has no desire to assume the burden of governing the fractious country, many of the soldiers, flush with victory, continue to make southern advances.

Both situations put the UN peacekeepers in dangerously-awkward positions.

They are on the island to keep the two sides apart, but when either community launches an offensive, the troops can only pull back and observe.

That situation has led to increasing frustration among the troops and further erosion of the UN's effectiveness as a peacekeeper.

"The UN is going the same way as the League of Nations," said one Canadian soldier.

"Maybe we could help solve this thing, but we can't if they don't take the chains off us."

Jobless Benefits Seekers Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 748,000 Canadians registered for unemployment insurance benefits at the end of June, a drop of nine per cent from the 825,000 seeking jobless benefits a month earlier, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Benefits paid in June dropped to $148 million compared with the $202 million paid in May.

Statistics Canada said total payments from the fund for the first six months of this year were $1,205 million, four per cent more than the same period in 1973.

The average weekly payment to claimants in June was $73.57, an increase of nine per cent from the $67.38 paid a year ago.

U.S. PLANES BUZZED JET FLYING QUEEN

LONDON (Reuter) — The Evening News says a British airliner flying the Queen over West Germany was buzzed earlier this year by four United States jet fighters who thought it was a dummy target in a NATO exercise.

The newspaper quotes the pilot of the British Airways VC-10 as saying he was so sure his aircraft had been in danger that he logged the incident as a near miss.

It says a full-scale inquiry was ordered in London and Berlin and as a result air-traffic control procedures were tightened up for future flights by the Queen.

The newspaper says the near miss occurred March 13 when the airliner was over the major industrial and rail centre of Karlsruhe. The Queen was flying to Bali to continue her tour of Australia and Indonesia which had been interrupted by the general election in Britain.

A royal spokesman said the report was being looked into.

Wreck Found

LA PAZ (AP) — A search patrol Tuesday found the wreckage of a missing U.S.

Air Force C-141 transport strewn over several miles on a snow-swept plateau 30 miles north of the Bolivian capital. The patrol confirmed all seven crew were killed. The plane crashed in foul weather Sunday against the Huayna Potosi, two snow-capped mountain peaks.

UN FORCES TOOTHLESS

By KEVIN DOYLE
LONDON (CP) — The fierce fighting and disorder in Cyprus is likely to prompt a critical study by international experts into the functions and effectiveness of United Nations peacekeeping forces.

Many already believe the conflict has shown the 4,400-strong UN force on the island to be a toothless tiger at best and a costly waste of money at worst.

The international Institute for Strategic Studies, an independent body, is known to be evaluating the role of peace forces with special emphasis on Cyprus but with a view to their usefulness in the Middle East as well. The conclusions it reaches are not expected to be encouraging for the future of such ventures.

The Cyprus contingent is made up of 1,400 British troops, 950 Canadians, varying numbers of Austrians, Danes, Finns and Swedes, along with three Irishmen.

While there seems to be a few experts who doubt the courage, dedication and goodwill of the troops themselves, there appears to be a growing consensus here that without being heavily equipped and carrying a clear mandate to fight to preserve the peace, there is little such a force can contribute.

Seldom has this been more evident than when two UN armed personnel carriers arrived outside the U.S. embassy in Nicosia Monday after the shooting which killed the American ambassador had stopped.

The vehicle halted near the chanting, unruly mob of Greek-Cypriots for a few minutes then drove off while an embassy official shouted fruitlessly: "Where are you going? Come back. Come back."

The UN's general inability to quell the Cyprus fighting until the Turks were prepared to stop, except in relatively-minor local incidents, has reminded many observers of its helplessness in trying to ward off the 1967 war between the Arabs and Israelis.

The peacekeeping force between the two sides, which included Canadians, had, to

Youth Camps Stay Open

The B.C. government has no intention of closing down provincially-funded youth camps, says James Sadler, Human Resources deputy minister.

A directive from the department to program co-ordinators throughout the province last week ordered cancellation of outdoor activities involving an element of risk pending a review by the department.

The directive gave no reason for the order, and project workers were confused about the cancellation.

Sadler said last week the cancellation order was issued because of changing snow conditions throughout the province. He agreed later that the review of projects was prompted by a hiking accident near Port Alberni, in from Brahmnan Lake school which two 15-year-old boys suffered broken legs.

He said his department wants project workers to bring back to camps any groups which might be on hiking, mountain-climbing or other excursions where there is an element of danger "until we review the whole program."

But he added: "We have no intention of closing the camps down. There has been some misunderstanding."

Sadler said location of some camps might be changed if youngsters are in any danger at the camps themselves.

But he said he won't know the details of any such moves until the programs have been reviewed.

That Time of Ear Again

By MARY MOORE

The majority of cooks I have talked to this month all know that fresh corn on the cob needs only to be cooked 2 or 3 minutes.

Corn on the Cob is the best by far and at its very best roasted in the husk in an open fire.

While it is plentiful make the most of it on and off the cob.

SUMMER SUCCOTASH

6 ears fresh corn
2 c. shelled out fresh lima beans or chopped yellow butter beans
¾ to 1 c. cream or rich milk
1 tbsp. butter
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. white pepper

With sharp knife cut the corn kernels from the cobs without cutting too deeply into cobs, then with the back of your knife scrape out the remaining pulp. Cook the beans in salted water to barely cover for 8 minutes. Add corn and cook 5 minutes longer. Drain well. Add cream or milk, butter, salt and pepper and heat nearly to boiling. Serve at once.

CORN WITH GREEN PEPPER AND ONION

3 tbsp. minced onion
½ c. diced green pepper (about one-half pepper)
3 tbsp. butter or margarine
3 c. raw corn kernels (or fresh frozen when fresh is not in season)
6 tbsp. light cream or milk
½ tsp. salt

Cook the onion and green pepper in the butter in a saucepan over low heat until just tender. Add the remaining ingredients and cook 2 or 3 minutes longer, or until corn is barely tender.

The next recipe is for a Corn Pudding. I like it especially well because it may be baked while you are roasting the meat for dinner and it takes the place of potatoes.

CORN PUDDING (Highly recommended)

2 c. fresh corn kernels (or canned kernel corn)
2 cups scalded milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tsp. sugar

Victoria Times THIRD SECTION FOOD and nutrition

1½ tbsp. melted butter or margarine
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
Add corn to scalded milk then add them to all remaining ingredients. Pour into buttered casserole or baking dish. Bake in a pan or warm water at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour, or until firm. If desired, ½ cup minced cooked ham or grated cheese or 2 tablespoons minced onion may be added to pudding mixture before baking, to make this into a more nutritious casserole for a meal that is short on meat.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: FIREHOUSE DOUGHNUTS

By MAUREEN MULLAN

(Today's reader recipe is from Mrs. Maureen Mullan of 915 Oliver Street in Victoria. If you have a favorite or family dish you would like to share, mail the recipe to the Family Desk, The Times, 3621 Douglas Street, Victoria, V8W 2N4.)

Enjoy this new feature every week, and wanted to share one of my family's favorite recipes with you. It is a very easy version of a popular Hawaiian doughnut known as a Malasada.

My friend's husband is on the fire department on Oahu and all the fellows exchange recipes which they cook right at the firehouse. This is one of them.

MALASADAS

¾ cup biscuit mix such as Bisquick
1 tsp. lemon extract
½ tsp. cinnamon
1 egg
Mix together and beat well. Take slice of bread and cut into quarters. Dip in batter to cover and fry in deep hot fat. Drain and drop in bag of sugar and cinnamon, shake to cover and serve hot.
These taste for all the world like fresh baked doughnuts and are so easy to prepare. I'm sure that they will become a favorite with every-one.

If "Lonely Grandma" reads this, please get in touch with Mrs. Daphne Temple, of 1243 Richardson

Mrs. Temple received a letter from "Lonely Grandma" after her recipe for vinegar tarts appeared in the Times' Your Turn to Cook feature.

Mrs. Temple mentioned she had been told her tarts tasted similar to Shoofly Pie. Her unknown correspondent sent her a recipe for the real thing. Here it is:

SHOOFLY PIE

One nine-inch unbaked pie shell
1 tsp. soda
Two-thirds cup of boiling water
Two-thirds cup light molasses
One-third of a cup of butter
½ cup brown sugar
1½ cups flour
½ cup raisins
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Prepare pie shell from favorite recipe or pie crust mix. Do not prick.
Dissolve soda in boiling water.
Stir in molasses.
Mix butter, sugar and flour to make a crumbly mixture. Sprinkle some of the crumbly mixture in pie shell. Pour over part of the molasses mixture and sprinkle some of the raisins.

Repeat layers until everything is used, ending with a layer of the crumbly mixture.

Bake for 30 minutes until filling is browned and firmed.

Serve slightly warm and top with whipped cream.

Mrs. Temple is grateful for the recipe but she wishes she could thank the sender.

"Bless her heart," she told the Times. "But I do wish she'd signed it."

FRESH Vancouver Island corn is at its peak again with its plump kernels and creamy yellow color as the centre of attention at barbecues, fairs, large gatherings and simple family meal. Here, seven-year-old Kerry O'Brien tucks into a stack of golden cobs at the dinner table. When buying freshly picked corn, look for bright green husks wrapped around well-filled ears. Refrigerate corn with husks, until ready to use. Seasoned or plain butter enhance the fresh flavor.

Zucchini squash are so prolific in bearing during August and September as to become almost an embarrassment. A versatile and delicious vegetable however, capable of many uses so you never tire of them.

At four to six inches long, these slender squash fruit double as cucumber for crisp tenderness without the cucumber flavor which is not liked by some people.

Jellied Golden Salad is lovely for a warm day: Summer Squash with Herbs is a quick skillet or covered frypan supper dish to serve with macaroni and cheese.

It may come as a surprise to find that summer squash is rated appreciably higher in vitamins than cucumber, so why not use it freely? Serve it raw on the day it comes from the garden, and cooked when a day old.

No need to peel or remove seeds when zucchini squash are four to six inches long. Just rinse with water and dry with a cloth. Cut off only the stem end thinly and the blossom end.

For Golden Salad, substitute a small young Summer Crookneck squash if you have one ready to pick. Just as delicious raw or cooked, but a lovely golden color on the outside skin.

GOLDEN SALAD

1 pkt plain unflavored gelatine
1/2 cup cold water
1 cup boiling water
1 Tbsp fresh lemon juice
1 cup grated raw carrot
1/2 tsp salt
1 cup diced (less than 1/4-inch) Crookneck or Zucchini
1/2 tsp finely chopped onion

OR

1/2 tsp finely chopped green onion

Soak gelatine in basin (large enough to hold all ingredients) with cold water to dissolve. Add 1 cup boiling water and the salt, stirring thoroughly. Set on shelf in refrigerator to thicken slightly.

Meanwhile grate the raw carrot into another bowl and sprinkle at once with fresh lemon juice to prevent discoloration and loss of vitamin C.

SUMMER SQUASH WITH HERBS

3 or 4 zucchini squash (about 4 cups of 1/2-inch slices)
1 Tbsp sliced green onion, or chopped chives
1/2 cup finely chopped celery and leaves
1/4 cup soft margarine, or soy oil
1/2 tsp salt
3 Tbsp chopped parsley or tiny horseradish leaves
1/2 tsp sweet basil or dill leaves

Gently cook the onion (or chives) and celery in the margarine, using a large pan with a cover. Add the salt, sliced squash, parsley and basil.

Replace lid, cook very gently for seven or eight minutes, until squash is tender but not mushy.

Serve over hot cooked brown rice and lentils.

SQUASHES PASS FREEZING TEST

Recent tests carried out by Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, show that Zucchini (summer squash) and Butternut, Acorn and Hubbard squash (winter squashes) can be frozen successfully.

Following is a summary of the preparation required for freezing and for cooking the various types of squash.

Zucchini Wash Zucchini and slice into 1/4-inch slices; blanch for two minutes, chill thoroughly, pack dry, and freeze. Before serving, thaw for five minutes and cook in boiling water for 12 to 18 minutes depending on the size of the slices.

Butternut Squash Peel squash, dice and blanch for two minutes. Chill quickly, drain and pack dry for freezing. To serve, cook for 7 to 8 minutes in boiling water. An alternate method is to cook the squash until tender, cool quickly, mash or sieve and then freeze. It is only necessary to reheat squash frozen in this way.

Acorn Squash — Cut squash in small pieces and steam, boil or bake until tender. Cool quickly, mash or sieve and freeze. Reheat before serving.

Hubbard Squash — Follow the same method as for the Acorn Squash and reheat in the top of a double boiler before serving.

When the weather is hot and appetites are not, it's a good time to serve something new or different. In fact, this may be just the opportunity you've been waiting for to introduce summer squash to your family. And if they've already tried it, they'll need no coaxing to eat it again.

The best known summer squash are vegetable marrow, which is a creamy yellow color, and Zucchini which is dark green in color with black stripes. Both are cylindrical in shape with one end larger than the other. Unlike winter squash which have a hard shell and a firm, dry flesh, summer squash have a tender delicate skin with a moist, spongy flesh.

Rich Spicy Broth Juicy Reward In Boiling Beef

By KARL ROHRICH

There is no doubt that a juicy piece of boiled beef is a toothsome dish. However, the ways of cooking it vary in east and west, north and south. The ingredients that go with it are important. But there is general agreement that the broth which accompanies boiled beef should be rich and flavored with spices and plenty of fresh vegetables.

Starting with a piece of brisket of beef you have the choice between a juicy piece of meat and a thin broth or a rich broth and a piece of meat with most of the taste boiled out of it.

If you begin the cooking process with cold water, the meat will surrender its juices, giving a rich broth, but if you place the meat in boiling water, this closes the pores and the meat remains juicy inside. This is why you should have two pieces of brisket for this dish, as well as plenty of whatever vegetables are in season—celery, leeks, onions, shallots, French beans, carrots, kohlrabi, parsley root and leaves, mushrooms, green peppers and potatoes. How is this dish cooked?

In the first place, you will need several saucepans. First of all, a large one, in which you should simmer for four to five hours the piece of brisket (with a good tablespoon of salt) which will provide the rich broth we have already mentioned.

This piece of brisket should, if possible, be still attached to the bone, since this gives you a better broth. When this broth is ready, pour it in equal measures into three smaller saucepans and add salt to taste. Bring salted water to a rolling boil in the fifth saucepan and add the piece of boneless brisket that you intend to serve in slices. While the broth is cooking you will have cleaned and cut up the vegetables. Into the first small saucepan place the carrots, the beans and the kohlrabi, in the second the leeks, the celery, the onions, the parsley root and the green pepper, while the third is reserved for the potatoes and mushrooms, both of which have been cut into slices. (In this way each vegetable retains as much as possible of its own taste and does not become mushy despite.)

Cooking times: saucepan containing brisket between 45 and 60 minutes, according to the size of the meat; saucepan containing sliced potatoes 20 to 25 minutes; saucepan containing carrots about 30 minutes, and the saucepan containing the leeks and onions roughly 20 minutes. Co-ordinate the times so that everything is ready at the same time.

Then transfer the vegetables, a ladle at a time, to a deep serving dish. When all the vegetables have been removed from the saucepans, combine all five broths in one saucepan, season to taste and finally pour the resulting broth over the vegetables.

The brisket should then be cut into thin slices and served separately from the vegetables. Whether one eats the beef with horseradish or a mild mustard is a matter of personal taste.

Incidentally, the piece of brisket which provided the broth can also be eaten. When it is cold, cut it into strips and mix it with vinegar, oil, pepper, salt, capers, sliced olives and, if you care for them, sliced pickled gherkins. Let the mixture stand in a cold place for a day and you have a tasty cold beef salad. The best accompaniment is perhaps a slice of bread.

Try a Souper Starter

Soup is a good beginning to any meal, but on summer days when you want something, really refreshing, chilled soups are the perfect way to perk up dulled appetites. These may be served in glass bowls or in mugs over ice cubes and suitably garnished. For a buffet dinner party, they may be served in a frosty punch bowl or soup tureen.

At one time cold soups were served only in the most elegant restaurants. Vichyssoise, the French gourmet's soup, Gazpacho, the Spanish "salad-soup" are two of the most renowned cold soups. Today in addition to these favorites, a wide variety of other vegetable-based and chilled fruit soups are gaining in popularity. As well as "souper" starters, cold soups also provide a light yet satisfying lunch when served with a sandwich or salad.

Exquisitely flavored soups may be made at home in the electric blender with a minimum amount of work making them even more tempting summer fare.

This Classy Quartet Suits Outdoor Eating

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We can recall in clearly etched detail some fairly fancy spreads we've been privileged to enjoy around the world—fresh caviar in Iran; fresh foie gras in Alsace; restaurants around the Vieux bouillabaisse and bouillabaisse in restaurants around the Vieux Port in Marseilles. But it literally is true that truffles and champagne are not more apt to aggravate and appease the appetite than humbler foods taken at a country outing. Four dishes for al fresco dining are offered here: an escabeche of fish; marinated beef to be grilled over charcoal; spareribs, vaguely Hawaiian, and sugared mango slices with champagne.

Skewered Beef With Herb Sauce

- 1 pound filet of beef or rib of beef, cut one and one-half inches thick
- 12 raw shrimp, shelled and deveined
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- ¼ cup peanut, corn or olive oil
- ¼ teaspoon powdered bay leaf
- ¼ teaspoon dried thyme
- 6 tablespoons butter, melted
- Tobasco sauce
- 4 lemon wedges
- Watercress for garnish, optional

1. Prepare a hot charcoal fire or preheat the broiler.
2. Cut the beef into 12 one-and-one-half-inch cubes.
3. Alternate three cubes of beef and three raw shrimp on each of 4 skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.
4. Blend the oil with the bay leaf and thyme. Brush the oil on the skewered foods. Place on hot grill or under broiler. Grill about five minutes, turning once or twice.
5. Meanwhile, melt the butter and add a dash of Tobasco. Serve the skewers with the hot butter poured over. Garnish with watercress if desired.

Escabeche of Fish

- 1½ pounds (cleaned weight) fish, left whole but with head removed
- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- ½ cup flour
- 2 cups oil, preferably olive oil
- 10 small cloves garlic, unpeeled but slightly crushed
- 1 cup thinly sliced carrot rounds
- 1 small onion, thinly sliced
- 1-3 cup wine vinegar
- 3 tablespoons water
- 2 sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoon dried

1. Prepare a hot charcoal fire or preheat the broiler.
2. Cut the beef into 12 one-and-one-half-inch cubes.
3. Alternate three cubes of beef and three raw shrimp on each of 4 skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.
4. Blend the oil with the bay leaf and thyme. Brush the oil on the skewered foods. Place on hot grill or under broiler. Grill about five minutes, turning once or twice.
5. Meanwhile, melt the butter and add a dash of Tobasco. Serve the skewers with the hot butter poured over. Garnish with watercress if desired.

- 2 hot dried red pepper pods
- 1 bay leaf
- 6 parsley sprigs

1. Any firm-fleshed fish can be used in this recipe. Score both sides of the fish with a sharp knife, making parallel and fairly deep gashes on both sides. Sprinkle inside and out with salt and pepper to taste.
2. Put the flour in a bag and add the fish. Shake the bag until fish is well-coated with flour.
3. Heat the oil and when it is very hot, add the fish. Cook about five minutes or until golden on one side. Turn and cook until golden brown all over, about three or four minutes. Transfer the fish to a deep dish.
4. Strain the oil and reserve one cup of it. Pour the cup of oil into a saucepan and add the garlic cloves and carrot. Cook about one minute and add the onion rings. Cook over high heat about two minutes and add the vinegar, water, thyme, pepper pods, bay leaf, parsley sprigs, and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and simmer about 10 minutes.
5. Pour the mixture over the fish and cover with wax paper. Cover with a lid and refrigerate about 24 hours.

1. Prepare a hot charcoal fire or preheat the broiler.
2. Cut the beef into 12 one-and-one-half-inch cubes.
3. Alternate three cubes of beef and three raw shrimp on each of 4 skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.
4. Blend the oil with the bay leaf and thyme. Brush the oil on the skewered foods. Place on hot grill or under broiler. Grill about five minutes, turning once or twice.
5. Meanwhile, melt the butter and add a dash of Tobasco. Serve the skewers with the hot butter poured over. Garnish with watercress if desired.

Barbecued Ribs With Ginger Sauce

- 1 teaspoon freshly grated ginger
- 1 cup ketchup
- 1 teaspoon freshly grated ginger
- 4 teaspoons butter
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon finely minced garlic
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1 rack of spareribs, the meatier and smaller the ribs the better

1. Prepare a hot charcoal fire or preheat the broiler.
2. Cut the beef into 12 one-and-one-half-inch cubes.
3. Alternate three cubes of beef and three raw shrimp on each of 4 skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.
4. Blend the oil with the bay leaf and thyme. Brush the oil on the skewered foods. Place on hot grill or under broiler. Grill about five minutes, turning once or twice.
5. Meanwhile, melt the butter and add a dash of Tobasco. Serve the skewers with the hot butter poured over. Garnish with watercress if desired.

- Salt and freshly ground pepper
- ¼ teaspoon monosodium glutamate, optional

1. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.
2. In a saucepan combine the ketchup, ginger, butter, Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, garlic, honey and coriander. Bring to the boil and stir to blend.
3. Place the spareribs on a rack meaty side up and sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste and monosodium glutamate. Place in the oven and bake 30 minutes or until nicely browned.
4. Brush the spareribs with a layer of sauce and bake 15 minutes longer.
5. Turn the spareribs and brush with sauce. Bake 15 minutes longer and turn. Brush with sauce. Continue baking 15 to 30 minutes longer, basting as necessary. Serve hot or cold.

- YIELD: Four servings.
YIELD: Four to six servings.

- 3 very ripe but firm mangoes
- ½ cup confectioners' sugar
- ¼ cup framboise (a raspberry eau de vie)
- Chilled champagne
- 1. Peel the mangoes. Run a knife around the perimeter of the pit. Use a large kitchen spoon and, starting at one end, carefully push the spoon's blade around the large pit of the fruit. Repeat on the other half of the mangoes. Discard the pit.
- 2. Cut the mango flesh into strips.
- 3. Place the strips in a bowl and sprinkle with sugar. Add the framboise and chill. Spoon the fruit and liquid into six serving dishes and add champagne (or any good dry wine) to taste.

Unripe Pears Picked

Homer, the Greek, knew what he was talking about when he acclaimed the pear as being "a gift for a king." Unlike most fruits, pears are picked before they are completely ripe. Prior to transporting them to the markets, they are exposed to a low temperature for at least a week. If the pears are not quite ripe when purchased, keep them in paper bag at room temperature. They are ready for eating when slightly soft at the base of the stem and once ripened, they should be kept in the refrigerator.

Watch Your Soyaburger

Last year "superburger" appeared on the market across the country. Essentially, a mixture of hamburger and hydrated soya protein, some 75 per cent hamburger to 25 per cent soya protein and some 70 per cent to 30 per cent. At that time these products were the object of much investigation and publicity.

Soyaburger on the retail market is not nutritionally inferior to all-meat hamburger, but Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, reminds to check the label carefully when buying soyaburger to be sure there is no misunderstanding of what is being purchased. The 70 per cent hamburger and 30 per cent hydrated soya protein should retail at about 20 cents per pound less than ordinary hamburger. The total fat content of this mixture is reduced and it shrinks somewhat less in cooking because the soya extender absorbs some of the meat juices.

Tuna edges out meat for a change in taste and texture in a spaghetti dish

Tuna Switch Spices Spaghetti

If the cooks in your family are angling for compliments at their next spaghetti dinner they can't go wrong with this recipe for fisherman's spaghetti sauce. B.C. Canned Salmon, herbs, and spices combine to make it a taste sensation.

But first, a word of caution:

any cook not prepared to serve the whole neighborhood should ensure that all kitchen windows are firmly closed while this tantalizing sauce simmers — the aroma is something else!

FISHERMAN'S SPAGHETTI SAUCE

1 can (3½ oz.) B.C. Salmon

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup thinly sliced carrot
½ cup chopped celery
4 tablespoons cooking oil
1 can (14 oz.) tomato sauce
¼ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon rosemary
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste
Grated Parmesan cheese.
Drain and flake salmon, reserving juice and mashing bones. Cook onion, carrot, and celery in oil until onion is tender. Add tomato sauce, flaked salmon, reserved salmon juices, and seasonings. Simmer slowly for 1 hour. Serve over hot cooked spaghetti; top each serving with grated Parmesan cheese. Serves 4.

No One Knows Why Outdoors Improves Food

For some unknown reason, food just seems to taste better outdoors, whether it's on the beach or on the trails, in the woods or right in one's own backyard. The location greatly affects food decisions, but in every instance, food must be chosen and prepared carefully to avoid spoiling a good time and to provide adequate nutrition.

On camping trips, to simplify transportation and if a good source of water is available, choose compact, lightweight foods such as dehydrated soups, instant beverage mixes and freeze-dried or canned precooked meats, poultry, fish and main dish combinations. Dried fruit, cheese and peanut butter are easy-to-carry and provide important vitamins and minerals, as well as energy and bulk. If you plan to buy fresh meat, fruits and vegetables along the way, make sure you have adequate storage. An ice chest will be necessary — count on the ice taking up almost half of the space in the chest. Water frozen at home in a plastic container provides safe drinking water as it melts. Many foods, such as salad dressings and processed cheeses and spreads do not need refrigeration until opened. When possible, buy perishables in small sizes that can be used at one time. Store breads, cookies, crackers, cereals and other dry staples in airtight moisture-proof containers or plastic bags.

Whether you are cooking over an open fire or a folding grill in addition to saucepan, skillet and kettle, include cooking in aluminum foil. This type of cooking is especially designed for those days when you can pick up fresh meat and vegetables in a nearby town. Start with a protein food—meat, poultry, fish or seafood. Small pieces such as meat cubes, ground meat, chicken wings and fish filets cook best. Add some vegetables, a little butter or margarine and season to taste. Add a small amount of juice, tomato sauce or French dressing and wrap tightly. Depending on the amount of food in each packet, the size of the pieces and the source of heat, these dinners will require from 30 minutes to an hour to cook. Make sure the coals are hot, never blazing, to avoid burning a hole through the foil. Use tongs to turn the packages and do not poke holes in the wrap. When food is done, just tear the package open and eat as is.

If you are cooking over a grill, simplify cleanup activities by lining the bowl of the grill with foil to catch the drippings and ash residue. If you need to wash anything, heat the water in a large pot set over the fire. Make sure you coat the outside with soap to keep the smoke from blackening it and covering it with a sticky residue. Bring plenty of paper towels, soap and detergent and scouring pads.

Last but not least, clean up before leaving. Put garbage in heavy duty plastic bags and dispose of it in containers provided by the campsite or at the nearest dump.

Just for Corn...

PARSLEY BUTTER

¼ cup softened butter
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Cream butter and add remaining ingredients. Place by tablespoons on waxed paper, roll and chill. Slice to serve, 6 servings (2 teaspoons each).
Chili Butter: Make as above using 1 teaspoon chili powder instead of parsley and green onion.

YOU'D BE smiling too if you were about to sink your teeth into a hearty tomato sandwich! Agriculture Canada reminds you that fresh Canadian tomatoes should be enjoyed on or with all your favorite sandwiches while they are at their peak of goodness.

Tomatoes Crammed With Vitamin A

Red, ripe and full-flavored, fresh tomatoes are one of late summer's most wonderful treats and a welcome one indeed.

If vine-ripened tomatoes flourish in your garden you can enjoy the bursting juiciness and marvellous flavor of freshly picked tomatoes. If you are buying them in the local market look for plump, firm tomatoes with a uniform red color and unbroken skin.

Store ripe tomatoes uncovered in the refrigerator, but ripen the not-quite-ripe ones at room temperature away from direct sunlight.

Tomatoes are an important source of certain nutrients. One medium tomato provides four times as much vitamin A as an orange and two medium tomatoes contain the same amount of vitamin C as an orange.

Tomatoes have a wide variety of uses and fit easily into any meal. Probably one of the most delightful ways of eating this luscious food is in the form of the ever-popular tomato sandwich. Who could possibly resist such an experience — biting into juicy slices of fresh tomato between two pieces of fresh bread?

Here are a few more sandwich ideas which can be enjoyed with summer tomatoes. Try them while tomatoes are at their peak of goodness.

Spread slices of rye bread with butter, margarine or mayonnaise. Top with sliced tomatoes and cooked corned beef. Sprinkle tomatoes with chopped green onions or chives. Serve with prepared mustard. Voila! An Open-Faced Corned Beef and Tomato on Rye!

For the lunch-box crowd, pack sliced tomato, buttered bread, lettuce and salt and pepper separately. Assemble sandwich when ready to eat.

Use tomato wedges to garnish your favorite sandwich plate.

For easy entertaining, serve platters of cold meats, cheese, assorted breads and, of course, sliced, tomatoes. Let everyone make their own delicious sandwich.

Try broiled, open-face cheese and tomato sandwiches for a breakfast treat.

Do As You Please When You Reach 63

dear
abby

DEAR ABBY: I've been a widow for three years and have been longing for male companionship ever since. Oh, I have plenty of women friends, but it's not the same. I read in the obituaries recently that a woman I knew from church had died and was survived by her husband. I remembered him as a tall, nice-looking, refined gentleman, so I wrote him a letter offering my condolences, and I invited him to supper at my home. (I hadn't seen him in about 10 years.)

He came, bringing flowers, and we had a wonderful time — just the two of us.

As he was leaving he said, "I am lonely, too. How about my moving in with you?" (I am 63 and he is 74.)

I asked: "Is this a proposal?"

He said: "Lord, no! We're too old for that!"

Abby, I have five children and 21 grandchildren who are always popping in on me, and I can't have a man living with me. On the other hand, I would enjoy having steady company and I'm afraid that if I pass him up some other widow will grab him.

If I were to "rent" him a room and call him a "boarder," do you think people would talk? — LONELY.

DEAR LONELY: People probably would talk plenty. Whether you care what they say or not is strictly your business. At 63, I think you've earned the right to do as you please.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 30 years. We have two grown children living away from home. He's a hard-working man and a good husband in many ways, but he is getting on my nerves.

He works in a machine shop days, and his clothes get very dirty, so as soon as he gets home he takes off his work clothes and sits around in his underwear. He wears regular undershorts and undershirts that are low cut under the arms. I've pleaded, demanded and berated him, but nothing helps.

I always keep myself looking nice around the house, but he doesn't care what he looks like. I have laid out fresh trousers and shirts for him, and even a nice robe, but he never touches them. We don't go out much, and the few times people have dropped in he stays in his old underwear. I am so tired of seeing him like that I could scream. Any suggestions? — Going Crazy.

DEAR GOING: Buy him some good-looking Bermuda shorts and some colorful T-shirts and lay them out for him. If that doesn't work, go ahead and scream. It won't improve the scenery, but you will feel better.

DEAR ABBY: A year and a half ago I met Jim. I was five months pregnant at the time. I told him about it, but he said he loved kids and he would never hold against me the fact that I had had another man's child. He wouldn't even consider my suggestion that maybe I should give up my baby as soon as it was born.

I was so happy I thought I had died and gone to heaven. All of a sudden, Jim changed his mind. Now he wants me to give my baby away. He says he can't love another man's child. Abby I have grown to love my son and I can't give him up now.

I love Jim, too, and don't know what I would do without him. Is he being unfair, or am I wrong to expect him to accept another man's child? Please help me. I am all mixed up. I am 20 and Jim is 25. — Alone.

DEAR ALONE: Jim is unfair. He agreed to accept your child. If he now finds that he cannot, you must decide whether you will have fewer regrets giving up Jim or giving up your son. No one can make that choice for you. God bless.

Inventor, 10, Wows NASA

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — It may not be a better mousetrap, but 12-year-old Becky Schroeder has come up with an invention that may have many people, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, beating a path to her door.

The young inventor was 10 years old when she originated her idea of coating sheets of heavy paper with phosphorescent paint and then using them as backing sheets placed under writing paper.

The backing sheet is exposed to a minute or two of light and will glow for as long as one or two hours allowing a person not only to be able to write in the dark, but also to be able to write neatly.

Becky's "luminescent writing sheet" is about to receive U.S. Patent Office No. 3,832,556. The number will become official on Aug. 27, making her one of the youngest patent holders in the nation.

Becky's father, Charles F. Schroeder, an inventor himself, encouraged his daughter to apply for the patent. She filed an application two years ago, declaring the invention was entirely her own.

In addition to solving writing problems in the dark — she got the idea while trying to do homework one night while waiting in a car for her mother at a shopping center

World Winces With Report On U.S. Crops

WASHINGTON (WP) — When the United States Department of Agriculture releases one of its crop reports, the reverberations quickly are felt around the world.

This was true in the wake of last Monday's forecast that put the corn harvest below 5 billion bushels — far less than even pessimistic analysis had predicted — and which also significantly reduced expected harvests for other feed grains, wheat and soybeans.

In a year when U.S. grain stocks are at the lowest point in more than a quarter of a century, the message from the drought-reduced crop report was clear: higher food prices and more inflation both here and abroad.

Because agriculture department officials from Secretary Earl Butz down as well as

Instant Effect

In the highest circles of this government, there was consideration of export controls on agricultural commodities, no matter how unpalatable the prospect. Large export sales of corn were rumored in Chicago grain markets.

And livestock, feeders, poultry raisers and dairy farmers — already squeezed by soaring feed costs — predicted widespread liquidation in the short term with smaller supplies and much higher prices to follow if corn, the major feed ingredient, stayed at $4 a bushel.

The effect of the crop report was immediate and obvious.

Because of the high stakes and potential impact of the news — good or bad — contained in one of the crop reports, the Agriculture Department has established careful procedures to protect the integrity of both the reporting process and the information contained in the final document.

Though the information gathering had begun laboriously some weeks in advance, the final assembly by the Crop Reporting Board took place in the bowels of the main agriculture department building in Washington in a final 12-hour spurt called the "lockup."

A uniformed guard stands outside. No one who enters after the 3 a.m. start of the lockup may leave until it ends at 1 p.m. All telephones have been disconnected.

The reason for the strict security is twofold.

First, the information contained in the report can be used for personal speculative gain if released prematurely.

Security Breach

There is a popular tale — though most say it is apocryphal — of a breach in lockup security that involved use of venetian blinds. A predetermined signal was given, the story goes, by a lockup participant who closed the blinds at a window and thus tipped a waiting accomplice outside whether a crucial crop estimate was high or low. The accomplice then invested in the market.

No one seems to be able to verify whether the incident actually occurred. But there are no windows in the basement lockup quarters today to either peer into or signal from.

When the crop report is complete and the lockup period is ended, the head of the reporting board goes into an adjacent room where waiting wire-service reporters have already opened phone lines to their offices.

The reporters move away from their phones and stand behind a white line in a procedure as old as the crop reporting board, which was established in 1905. The head of the board places a copy of the report, face down, next to each reporter's phone.

At precisely 3 p.m., the signal is given and the newsmen rush across the line and start reading the report summary to their headquarters. This is quickly translated into a story and appears on wire service tickers around the world within minutes.

The reason for the haste was more to do with wire-service competition than with any immediate value of the information, although interest is intense. The commodity markets, however, have all closed once the report is out and speculators and hedgers have overnight to absorb the information before trading resumes the next morning.

Another reason for the insulation of the crop reporting board is to protect it from undue political pressures during preparation of the report.

The temptation is perhaps too irresistible to nudge a number one way or another and thus convince people that things are better than they really are. To eliminate this possibility, the reporting board is out of touch with the other administration economists had earlier held out hopes for bumper crops large enough to tame the rate of inflation, the disappointment was all the more acute.

The next day the reaction was dramatic.

Corn hit a record $4 a bushel on some cash markets.

Commodity prices shot up on world futures exchanges. Though led by corn, the activity was not limited to domestic agricultural commodities but spread to metals, sugar, cocoa and coffee.

In Europe, grain prices had record daily advances.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped another 10.88 points after a 10.01-point decline on Monday. Stock market analysts said a major factor was the crop report and what it said about future inflation.

Cong Overrun Outpost

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces overran a pair of key outposts 50 miles northwest of Saigon and captured a huge slice of land around the nearby provincial capital of Tay Ninh, the Saigon command said today.

Command spokesman Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien said Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces captured the militia base at Phuoc Tanh, 10 miles west of Tay Ninh near the Cambodian border.

The communists also captured Cau Khoi, a military base and rubber plantation town six miles east of the provincial capital, Hien said.

Communist troops were within 10 miles of Tay Ninh on all four sides, although the main highway between the city of 200,000 and Saigon remained open, field officers said.

Far to the north, North Vietnamese troops attacked Quang Tri with a mortar barrage, the first assault on South Vietnam's northernmost provincial capital since the Jan. 28, 1973 cease-fire.

In Cambodia, government troops killed 29 rebels in a sweep Tuesday along the east bank of the Tonle Sap River, 16 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Military sources said rebel forces overran a government post at dawn today near Kraul Krabei, six miles southeast of Phnom Penh on Highway 2. Casualty figures were not revealed.

Intelligence officers in Saigon told newsmen about two weeks ago they expected a communist attempt to isolate and capture Tay Ninh, a frequent target of Viet Cong offensives in the past.

The fall of the two outposts Tuesday added at least 100 square miles of territory to communist-held land around Tay Ninh, officers said.

The capture of Phuoc Tan, where 150 militiamen held out for a week against heavy communist shelling and ground assaults, was the most significant gain, senior government officers said.

The fall of the post forced South Vietnamese military forces to retreat to the east bank of the Vam Co Dong River, a traditional infiltration corridor to the Saigon area, they said.

Fiery Tunnel 'Like Hell'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Coming through the tunnel was like coming through hell," said Fred Rontanz, 27, who walked to safety from a subway fire.

"If we had been down there longer there would have been deaths."

A board of inquiry convenes today to investigate the rush-hour fire that trapped more than 1,000 commuters for two hours in a smoke-filled tunnel 90 feet below the East River Tuesday evening. Four trains were stranded when electric power to the tube was shut off. Firemen said tunnel temperatures reached an estimated 100 degrees.

At least 125 persons, many weeping and covered with soot, were taken to hospitals for treatment of heat fatigue, smoke inhalation and other injuries.

No serious injuries were reported, however, and most were released after getting first-aid.

The fire was extinguished within 90 minutes, but it was another 40 minutes before power was restored to allow the stalled trains to be moved.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An American commercial fisherman had an expensive trip into Canada Tuesday.

George O'Day, 38, of Bremerton, Wash., not only had 112 salmon worth $610 confiscated when he appeared later in the day in provincial court, he was also fined $750 for fishing in Canadian waters.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said O'Day's vessel, The Boat, was 2.4 miles inside Canadian water in the Strait of Juan de Fuca when it was checked at 6:10 a.m. by fisheries officials.

O'Day told Judge William Ostler he had set his gillnet a mile inside American waters about 5 a.m., but had been pulled north.

"Don't you think you were taking a risk fishing so close to the boundary?", Ostler asked.

O'Day replied: "Yes, I'm guilty."

Long Road Ahead For Draft Dodgers

WASHINGTON (CP) — The road home for the 50,000-man army of United States exiles is expected to be a long, twisted trail through the halls of Congress.

President Gerald Ford, in calling for the way back to be cleared for the draft dodgers and deserters, said he is not certain how it will be accomplished.

But observers on Capitol Hill are predicting that it won't come through the power of presidential pardon—and some spokesmen for the evaders have stated they will settle for little less.

Bill Dixon, aide to Representative Robert Kastenmeier (Dem. Wis.), says the congressman "expects Ford will not take unilateral action, but will send legislative proposals to the Congress."

"The president can act on his own," Dixon says, "but he is unlikely to do so."

Kastenmeier and his staff are among the most knowledgeable persons in Washington on the subject. The congressman is chairman of a justice committee subcommittee in the House of Representatives.

Only hours after Ford made his statement that evaders should be allowed to "work their way back" through some form of "earned return," Kastenmeier dispatched a 1,000-page report to close aides of the president.

The report contains no recommendations—the committee won't have those ready until early next year. It was a verbatim record of three days of hearings on amnesty conducted by the congressman last spring.

It went to Attorney General William Saxbe and Defense Secretary James Schlesinger, the men Ford has given less than two weeks to work out the details of his proposals.

One of the problems is how to treat deserters and draft dodgers with equal justice and mercy.

Ford himself, in calling for a case-by-case review of the status of "some 50,000 of our countrymen," appears to recognize the futility of seeking a blanket solution.

Draft dodgers returning to the U.S.—those who have faced any penalties at all—have found that sentences have varied from court to court.

Those who have returned have found that their chances of avoiding prosecution are good and their chances of escaping prison even better.

Reports by federal agencies last year show about 10,000 men were prosecuted or investigated for draft law violations. Of that number, 977 were convicted. Only 260 went to prison.

Kastenmeier said his subcommittee has sought to hear testimony "which will help define the legal authority of Congress to grant amnesty legislatively."

One witness, Leon Ulman, deputy assistant attorney general, said the Congress has no such authority.

His position was supported by Walter Morse, general counsel for the selective service system, who said that for Congress to legislate amnesty might prompt prospective draftees to defy future calls to service.

As long as a year ago, John Elfin, U.S. attorney in Buffalo, N.Y., said, "I'm surprised more draft resisters haven't come back; you have substantial amnesty at this point."

He said the justice department was allowing a criminal charge to be stricken even after indictment if the individual agreed to submit to a pre-induction physical examination.

A majority of those who did were disqualified on physical, psychological or moral grounds.

There has been speculation about what Ford has in mind for evaders and deserters when he speaks of allowing them to "work their way back."

Senator Robert Taft (Rep. Ohio) is one who has proposed a limited amnesty bill. He would leave deserters to the mercy of the military while offering amnesty to draft dodgers who volunteered for some alternative such as service in veterans' hospitals.

Richard Nixon wanted none of that.

He drew no distinction between draft dodgers and deserters.

"We cannot provide forgiveness for them," he said. "Those who served paid the price. Those who deserted must pay the price."

That price, he said, "is not a junket in the Peace Corps or something like that."

"The price is a criminal penalty for disobeying the laws of the United States."

Spokesmen for the self-exiled draft dodgers have said they feel they have committed no crime and should not be subject to any sort of penalty—even some type of alternative service.

To accept conditions, they say, would be to admit to moral error and to justify the war in Vietnam.

Little Has Changed in Vietnam War

By PHILIP A. McCOMBS

NEAR PHUTHU, South Vietnam (WP) — The lieutenant smoked a cigarette and watched the puffs of exploding artillery shells just over the brow of a nearby hill.

Some soldiers came along the dirt road carrying stretchers of dead and wounded, and the lieutenant pulled a typewritten list of names from his pocket and made some check marks on it.

"Sgt. Khoi is the last dead one we got," said a stretcher-bearer. The lieutenant scanned the list and made a check mark behind Sgt. Khoi's name.

In the endless war that ravages this land, there is little unusual about the scene, except that this battlefield is only 16 miles north of Saigon.

This is the first time since the 18-month-old cease-fire went into effect that North Vietnamese army regular troops have been this close to Saigon, and this is the closest they have ever brought their Soviet-built tanks to the capital.

The battle is raging here on the southern tip of what the Americans used to call the Iron Triangle, a continuation of a battle that began three months ago and that the South Vietnamese army is having difficulty containing.

The battle began in May when the North Vietnamese backed by tanks overran three important government outposts and threatened the district capital of Bencat, a short distance north of here and just 22 miles north of Saigon.

A visit to Bencat Monday showed that the town is still controlled by the government although heavy fighting is visible less than a mile to the west.

But now the battle has moved here, six miles farther south, and it is going on actively with heavy artillery and rocket fire from both sides, heavy infantry fighting including massed night assaults and the co-ordinated, simultaneous use of at least 18 tanks by the North Vietnamese.

The fighting that stretches in a broad arc from here to Bencat is only one part of what now appears to be the most intense country-wide fighting since the cease-fire.

Battles continue to rage south of Danang on the country's northern coast as tens of thousands of refugees are being generated in the fiercest battles in the area since the cease-fire.

According to unofficial reports reaching Saigon, government reinforcements have been brought to the Da Nang area from Quangtri province just south of the demilitarized zone—a hazardous move for the government because its forces are stretched tight in Quangtri where communist forces are heavily massed.

Farther south on the central coast, heavy fighting continues in Quang Ngai province where North Vietnamese units overran the district town of Minhlong early Sunday morning—the second district town to be taken in the past two weeks.

Another district town, Nghia Hanh, is now threatened according to sources in Saigon, and if it falls the province capital of Quang Ngai itself may be exposed to communist attacks.

All this activity is taking place at a time when Saigon officials have been speculating that the communists may try to make military gains at a time of transition in Washington and possible wavering by President Ford.

It also follows in the wake of continuing and sharp cutbacks on Capital Hill of U.S. military aid for Saigon.

Well-informed sources here say those cutbacks have had their effect in increased casualty rates for the government side almost in direct proportion to the reduced number of artillery shells and bombs that it is able to expend.

Beyond the cutbacks, improvements in the technology of warfare on the other side have affected the tactics and strategy that the South Vietnamese forces must employ, limiting their effectiveness. The widespread use of tanks and of the deadly heat-seeking Sgella anti-aircraft missile are the most important of these improvements, along with the intensive development of a sophisticated and speedy supply system stretching all the way from the old DMZ to this point 16 miles north of Saigon and then farther south into the deepest reaches of the Mekong Delta.

Vietnamese girl sifts rubble once her home

"We haven't had really good air support since the Americans left," complained a soldier in Bencat Monday morning. "Now you have to call and call and call to get any kind of an airstrike and even then many of the pilots are afraid to get too close to the enemy positions."

For three months the North Vietnamese have been dug in west of Bencat and well-enough supplied not only to keep the government from retaking their main positions but also to push farther south to this battlefield.

Phuthu lies just over the brow of the hill from here. Communist forces appeared there before dawn a few mornings ago with 12 heavy tanks and six light tanks, according to soldiers here.

In the fighting that is still going on, three of these tanks were destroyed and one was captured, the soldiers said. They said they thought some of the destroyed tanks could still be seen on the other side of the hill, but that it was unwise to try to take a look since the battle was still going on there.

The dead bodies and bloody, wounded men lying and sitting around the lieutenant here Monday morning seemed to emphasize the point.

A government spokesman in Saigon, Col. Le Trung Hien, said 55 communist troops were killed in repulsing the tank attack. He said the fighting here did not directly threaten the security of Saigon.

But nevertheless, according to other observers, the North Vietnamese seem to be continuing to push south in this area, and its persistence and strength is worrisome to the government.

AUTHOR HOT AFTER NESSIE

By PETER MOSLEY

LONDON (Reuter) — British author and naturalist Gerald Durrell has thrown the weight of his international reputation behind a call for an all-out effort to track down the Loch Ness Monster.

Durrell, author of the best-selling My Family and Other Animals, makes the plea in his introduction to The Loch Ness Story, latest addition to what amounts to a whole library of books about Nessie.

"It seems incredible," he says, "that all the research to date has had to be done virtually on a shoestring by dedicated amateurs."

Backing, when it comes, is usually from America or other foreign sources, while "the disbelieving ranks of British science" look on petulantly.

Durrell hopes that this latest book will prod British authorities into providing financial support for an all-out effort to find out exactly what does exist in Loch Ness. First, though, a law must be passed affording complete protection for whatever it is that lurks in the lake.

REVIEWS EVIDENCE

The new book, by Nicholas Witchell, is essentially a review of all the evidence that has accumulated since the day in 1955 when Saint Columba reported encountering a "water monster" in Loch Ness.

Witchell believes that despite the sometimes half-baked attempts to track and identify the "monster," science is at last homing in on it. Most of the evidence suggests that Nessie is, in fact, a type of plesiosaur, a marine dinosaur thought to have been extinct for millions of years.

And there is almost certainly a whole family of them in the loch, says Witchell.

Photographs they took in 1972 clearly showed what appears to be the flipper of some giant creature gliding past the camera.

The academy's 1973 search was thought to have been a washout. But in a "stop press" section to his book, Witchell reports that examination of the sonar charts shows that on 12 occasions a large, moving object ventured into the sonar beam.

This should have set off the underwater camera. But the camera failed to operate—it is thought the intense cold of the water congealed oil in the equipment.

The academy is planning a much more sophisticated attempt with better equipment and hopes for final success are high, says Witchell.

In the meantime, leading scientists in the United States, including staff members at the Smithsonian Institution, are making further analysis of the 1972 pictures.

Forest Use, Operations Study Topics

TORONTO (CP) — Study groups will conduct analyses of land use and forest management policy in Canada for the Canadian council of resource and environment ministers, it was announced Tuesday.

The council, established 12 years ago, consists of federal and provincial ministers. The announcement was made after a meeting of its board of directors here.

The land-use study will include environment management legislation. The forestry group will analyze such elements as tenure, utilization, reforestation, productivity, public revenue and forest protection.

The executive at its meeting recommended that the ministerial council try to obtain an agreement among all Canadian governments on national environment objectives.

It was announced also that the council will sponsor a seminar on resource ownership to be held in conjunction with its fall meeting at Victoria Nov. 28-29.

Current president of the council is Alberta Environment Minister W. J. Yurko.

Bennett Blasts Errors of NDP

Opposition Leader Bill Bennett says "million-dollar mistakes" are becoming too frequent with the New Democratic government and he called the administration "recklessly incompetent."

The latest example of incompetence, the Social Credit leader said in a news release, is the mistake by Insurance Corporation of B.C. personnel which led to "lifetime pensions of $50 a week to 23 people" instead of just for two years.

When the government-owned ICBC announced the mistake last week it said 27 persons were eligible for the lifetime payment.

Bennett said the mistake in ICBC regulations cannot be blamed the clerks because the regulations have to pass through the cabinet.

"The minister responsible for putting the order-in-council to cabinet should resign," he said. "This province cannot afford ministers who make million-dollar mistakes regularly."

He also referred to a mistake made by the government in advertising the latest B.C. Hydro parity bond issue at 8½ per cent interest compounded quarterly instead of calculated quarterly. Such an error makes the province "the laughing stock of the financial world," he added.

Bennett said the ads prove Premier Dave Barrett doesn't even know the difference between simple interest and compound interest.

"The premier simply can't be trusted to handle public money."

Ship Blocked

MARSEILLES, France (AFP) — One hundred farmers prevented Tuesday the unloading of 1,200 tons of pork from China from the Polish freighter Novowieski. The farmers said they would wait to see if the pork was unloaded and were ready to "throw it in the sea."

BRAZIL TRIBE MOVES TO AVERT EXTINCTION

MERURE, Brazil (NYT)

The Bororos, once a great Indian warrior tribe of Brazil, have begun to bear children again after two years of deliberate abstinence from childbirth which appeared to be tribal suicide.

"The Bororos were weak and afraid of suffering, and so our women took the secret plant that stops childbirth," says the newly elected chief, Lourenço.

Eight babies have been born this year and four more are expected in this village with a population of 237 Bororos, in Brazil's far western state of Mato Grosso.

The Bororos have dwindled from 6,000 strong to about 400 in the last century. They used to dominate a vast area of the Brazilian heartland from Cuiaba and Corumbá in the west as far east as Goiás. Now most of the tribe is concentrated here at the Roman Catholic mission, where the land is sandy, the rivers distant and the woods are poor in game.

"We need protection or our race will disappear," declares Chief Aidji, principal spokesman for the Bororo tribe, and father of young Chief Lourenço.

The main enemy of the Bororos today is the white man's civilization, his vices, diseases and greed for land, Chief Aidji told recent white visitors, without any evidence of hostility.

The Bororos' protector have been the Salesian priests and nuns at the mission here, who since 1902 have tried to spare the tribe from shocks of confrontation with Brazil's aggressive pioneers; the settlers, woodsmen, road-builders, ranchers.

And now for the first time, the Bororos have cautious hopes in the government, represented by the National Indian Foundation and its pledges to defend Indian-territory and culture.

The story of the Bororos is basically the same for most of Brazil's Indian tribes, whose identity and even survival is threatened by the moving frontier of economic development.

There are no exact statistics for Brazil's Indian population, still widely dispersed in the Amazon Basin rain forest and other backlands. Current estimates are in the neighborhood of 100,000, although some anthropologists suggest the number could go up to 200,000, since vaccination and medical care are steadily improving life expectancy. It is said there were between one and three million Indians in Brazil when Portuguese explorers discovered the land in 1500.

Sitting on a bench in front of their stone "civilized" house, Aidji and Lourenço gave their views on Indian integration with the rest of Brazilian society. Aidji, 58, and his 27-year-old son believe that integration is inevitable but that they must go slowly.

Lourenço feels that the best thing for Indians is to remain in specially demarcated native parks "acquiring civilized habits little by little, and keeping their traditions.

Chief Aidji explained that the Bororos want the best of two worlds, their independence, but also civilized comforts like the solid houses, put up for them by German Catholics about 15 years ago, when it was feared that the tribe was so weak it would be unable to rebuild the traditional palm huts, which last about two years.

The recovery of lost tribal lands is now the principal objective of the Bororos. Big cattle ranchers and small farmers have progressively invaded what used to be Bororo land and cut down forests for pasture and farms and setting up ranches.

"The National Indian Foundation must take the civilizados off our lands," Chief Aidji declared, stressing that under the new Native Statute, it was the government's obligation to protect Indian patrimony.

The Rev. Vicente Cesar, president of the Missionary Council, presented the Bororo's demands to the National Indian Foundation in Brasília and was promised that a reserve of more than 500,000 acres would be set aside for the tribe, including forest land and possibly a stretch along the Caraca River.

Meanwhile, the tribal chiefs, with the help of the Salesians, are working out new means of livelihood because they know that even with more forest land and rivers, they will no longer be able to live from hunting and fishing.

Alcoa Drops Aluminum Foil

PITTSBURGH (UPI)

The Aluminum Co. of America has announced plans to phase out production and sale of household aluminum foil.

Alcoa, which has been making the foil since 1931, said it made the decision because of a shortage of metal and capital funds.

It said it would continue to produce the foil for industrial uses.

Arctic Sea Drilling by '76?

OTTAWA (CP) — Off-shore drilling for oil and gas in the Beaufort Sea probably will be permitted by 1976, the northern affairs department says in the current edition of its magazine Dialogue North.

"But millions of dollars of research will be needed before offshore exploration can begin," the magazine said in an edition devoted entirely to offshore operations in the Canadian Arctic. It was only a few months ago that a Western Arctic native group—the Committee for the Original People's Entitlement (COPE)—made public confidential government documents showing that cabinet had given its approval in principle to off-shore drilling in the Beaufort Sea.

COPE expressed alarm, saying the lack of research into environmental and other research exposed the Arctic to harmful oil spills. It also accused the government of withholding information about drilling plans from concerned northerners.

The magazine concedes that the subject "had been top secret" until COPE issued its news release last winter.

"Dialogue North owes a debt of gratitude to COPE for making this issue on offshore drilling possible," said the department in the special edition.

But the department also conceded "it was not possible to include a section on what will happen when oil spills occur in the Beaufort Sea or in the Arctic Basin."

"That subject is a delicate one and has not been cleared for public discussion at official levels," the magazine continued.

"It is anticipated that an oil spill edition will be published after the first major spill occurs in Arctic offshore waters."

Diplomatic Blackmail Bars Canadian From Hanoi

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — A year ago today Canada established diplomatic relations with North Vietnam. Yet in all the months since, Ottawa's nominee as ambassador — and the nominees of several other Western countries besides — have been allowed no closer to Hanoi than the austere reception room of the North Vietnamese embassy in Peking.

In a move that can be viewed as diplomatic blackmail or as a show of revolutionary solidarity, depending on the viewpoint, the Hanoi regime has refused to allow nate to present their credentials until their governments agree to allow the political arm of the Viet Cong — the so-called Provisional Revolutionary government of South Vietnam — to establish quasi-diplomatic missions in their capitals.

Ottawa, which recognizes the Saigon government of President Nguyen Van Thieu as the legitimate authority in the South, has refused the demand categorically. Accordingly, the man named to the Hanoi post — John Small, who is concurrently the ambassador to China — must sit and cool his heels in Peking.

Since Small was to be dually accredited — diplomatic parlance meaning that he would continue to live in the Chinese capital, visiting Hanoi whenever there was business to be done — the impasse has so far had little practical effect. But it raises the question whether the North Vietnamese were dealing "in good faith" — a favorite term of Communist regimes — when they negotiated the diplomatic agreement in the first place.

The negotiations were conducted in Peking, by Small, beginning soon after the Vietnam peace agreement took effect in January last year. There were few hitches, agreement in principle being reached several months before it was made official with an announcement on Aug. 21, 1973, that stressed the "common desire of the two countries to strengthen their relations."

The agreement made no mention of the Viet Cong regime and the North Vietnamese, who had insisted throughout the war that the Viet Cong and its political arm were an independent entity indigenous to the South. They were aware that Ottawa intended to establish diplomatic ties with the Thieu government. Nonetheless, they stalled on the presentation of Small's credentials for several months after the agreement, then weighed in with the demand for acceptance of a PRG office in Canada.

Hanoi's argument is that the communique issued by the Paris peace conference in February, 1973, which the Canadian government signed, explicitly recognized the existence of two regimes, two armies and two zones of control in the South.

Consequently, the contention is made that Ottawa is obliged to accept some form of representation from the PRG to balance the ties that have been established with the Saigon regime.

Ottawa's counter-argument is that recognition of two rival claimants to legitimacy in the South — in whatever form — would run counter to established diplomatic practice. Besides, Ottawa refuses to accept that the North Vietnamese have the right to make the status of the PRG — a contender for power in another country — an issue in Hanoi-Ottawa relations.

Ottawa is by no means alone in taking this position. A similar demand has been put to Belgium and Australia and possibly to other governments as well, always with the stipulation that there can be no progress — meaning no presentation of credentials by the nominated ambassadors — until it is accepted. In every case but one it has been refused.

The exception, regularly cited by the North Vietnamese in their discussions with the holdouts, is France. Under an agreement reached in Paris earlier in the summer, the PRG won the right to establish a mission with diplomatic rights and privileges in the French capital — a sort of liaison office, empowered to transact official business although not formally recognized as a full-blown diplomatic mission.

NEWTON'S LAW FOILS PRISONER'S BUDDIES

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI)—The law—Newton's, that is—caught up with two young men who tried to feed a buddy liquor and wine through a 35-inch rubber hose stuck into a jailhouse window.

Gravity and the police broke up the party Tuesday. Authorities at the Bridgeport correctional centre said they found Joseph Mauro, 16, and Albert Rodriguez, 25, outside a first-floor window on the east wing of the facility, standing next to a jug of wine and a bottle of liquor.

Protruding through the window was the rubber hose, through which an inmate inside the jail was trying to suck up the liquids.

Warden Jose Santos said the unnamed inmate would have needed "a lot of suction" to get any of the booze.

Authorities charged Mauro and Rodriguez with "conveying unauthorized materials into a correction centre."

Canadian Hopeful Of Sea Law Pact

CARACAS (CP)—The United Nations Law of the Sea Conference is on the home stretch with Canada leading the way in the search for international co-operation, says Alan Beesley, head of the Canadian delegation.

"I've always been optimistic about the eventual results... because everybody needs everybody else. It's a little like a floating crap game—nobody has all the votes on every issue."

He said in an interview Tuesday there has been increasing support of the Canadian position, and countries who formerly opposed Canada on some issues now are co-sponsoring draft articles on the same questions.

Development of the law of the sea has been an evolving process. Some countries have claimed sovereignty over a six-mile stretch, some 12 miles. A number of Latin American countries claimed up to 200 miles and labelled it "patrimonial sea."

Only in the last six years, since establishment of the international sea-bed committee, has any attempt been made to reach major international agreement.

From the start Canadians were the theologians of the conference, said Beesley.

"We said that the old law of the sea was an anachronism, and we acted unilaterally to back up our claim."

While other countries tried to justify the ancient laws, Canada challenged them to forget tradition.

An oil spill in Chile has added widespread support for Canada's position on the prevention of marine pollution at the conference.

In a public meeting of a committee which deals with the marine environment, Fernando Zegers of Chile officially thanked Canada for its technical assistance in the current oil spill crisis in the Straits of Magellan. He urged the formation of an international emergency body to deal with such disasters in the future.

"Without dramatizing the problem," said Zegers, "we must draw lessons from necessity. Such accidents raise our awareness of the importance and urgency of setting up an effective international machinery to prevent serious consequences in a situation such as this."

In the absence of such an organization, Chile has adopted emergency measures, including the closing of the international strait in the interest of marine safety and the prevention of further pollution.

Before the disaster, such unilateral coastal state action has been proposed by Canada but opposed by Chile and many other states as a necessary emergency measure in self-protection.

Chile previously had not supported Canada's proposal that the coastal state should have the right to enforce more stringent standards in sensitive areas close to their coasts, but in his speech Zegers spoke of "the risk of serious pollution of the marine environment in a region which is ecologically virgin, and closely dependent on the sea."

Under existing laws, only the country of origin, or the flag state, has responsibility for its vessels at sea, and control over their movements.

Bicycle Seats Tested

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal consumer affairs department and the Canadian Medical Association both plan to examine the safety of extra seats which allow bicycling parents to transport their children.

Both organizations say they have received no specific complaints about the seats. But the consumer affairs department's product safety branch had received a letter pointing out potential dangers of extra seats from Dr. Earl Cooperman, an Ottawa physician.

Cooperman says he began to question use of the seats earlier this month when one of his five-year-old patients almost died as a result of riding on the back of her father's bicycle.

The father had swerved to avoid a pedestrian. He was able to protect himself but his daughter, strapped in her seat, fell to the pavement and suffered a fractured skull.

Cooperman said he is not criticizing manufacturers on bolt-on seats. But there was just no way to protect a child riding as a bicycle passenger.

"It's just the nature of a bicycle," he says.

His letter did not "constitute the end-product of a lot of research." But he thought someone should look into the matter.

Neither the CMA nor the consumer affairs had yet planned details of their investigations, and did not say when results and recommendations would be ready.

Bus Talks Progressing

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) and the union representing its 5,700 striking employees reached agreement Tuesday night on about 10 more minor contract issues, but the three major areas of dispute remain to be discussed.

The bargaining progress was made Tuesday after provincial mediator Jack Speranzini persuaded negotiators for the Amalgamated Transit Union to present the TTC with revised demands on some of the about 50 issues which were unresolved.

Main issues are wages, elimination or reduction in shift shifts, and an improved cost-of-living clause.

The Many Pleasures From Your Garden

The art of gardening bestows many pleasures on the gardener, a major one being the gathering of produce at the peak of perfection. This may be applied to either flowers or fruits and vegetables. From now until October questions will refer mainly to fruits of various kinds. When is the time to pick peaches? When do I pick tomatoes? What size should squash reach?

Each fruit has its own stage of perfection when its flavor is thought to be superb. The word "fruit" is here used as referring to the result of pollination, not as vegetable opposed to fruit in the usual sense.

Flavor is such a personal thing that some people object to ripe fruits; they have been accustomed all their lives to less ripe stages and are simply unacquainted with what some of us consider the true flavors of common fruits.

The stage of superior flavor is reached (in most temperate zone fruits) while still attached to the parent plant, noticeably in the case of cane and bush fruits like berries and currants.

Since the advent of commercial cold storage, freezing and home refrigeration, less people reach the homemaker's age with a personal knowledge of fruits ripened in sun while on the plants. This is a pity for it leads to a lower standard of perfection.

Fruits gathered for marketing must be firm enough to be handled several times, or moved by mechanical means, without the outer coverings being bruised or broken. Therefore the fruits must be harvested (again, often mechanically) before they are at flavor peak; in other words before they are ripe.

When we have fruits ripening in the garden, we can look at them each day and gather only those which have reached perfection.

Their flavor when eaten the same day will not resemble the same kinds picked before maturity and ripened later, but advantages in addition to flavor include no sugar needed with peaches and berries, and no salt required for tomatoes, cucumbers, or peppers.

An easy test for ripeness for tree fruits is to gently lift the fruit in the hand with an upward motion. Peaches, apples, apricots and pears will separate from the twig when they are ripe. Exceptions to this method exist: winter apples are gathered before ripe; Bartlett pears must be picked before fully ripe or they rot within a day. They still have the best flavor when eaten at once.

Tomatoes should be an even scarlet, or deep gold for the orange varieties; pick only those needed at one time.

They keep for a day or two even though ripe, better on the plant than in a refrigerator.

In fact, no sun-ripened fruit is improved by chilling before eating. Here I know I'll be at odds with many opinions. Chilled cantaloupe or musk melon will be cited, and chilled grapefruit, and what about peach slices under mounds of ice-cream? You can have them all in exchange for sun-warmed fruits, ripe before picking.

You too should try them just once with an open mind and anticipatory taste buds. With some of these fruits growing in your garden you have the opportunity now, this season, to set a new standard of perfection in flavor for yourself and family.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

After East had won the first trick in today's deal, he recognized the almost-certain futility of returning partner's suit. After some deliberation, East knew what suit he was going to play back. The question he had to decide was which card in that suit he was going to lead at trick two. East-West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South West North East

1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

The five hearts was played off dummy on West's opening lead of the heart jack, and East won the trick with his king. It was obvious that South possessed the heart queen, since West's lead of the jack of hearts had denied the queen.

There flashed the thought that West might have started with a six-card heart suit, in which case South had been dealt the doubleton queen.

If this set-up existed, then a heart return would drive out both North's ace and South's queen, and establish the heart suit for West. But East dismissed this possibility, on assumption that South was more likely to possess the Q-x-x or Q-x-x-x of hearts for his one notrump opening bid. And, as East viewed the dummy, a shift to the spade suit seemed indicated.

If South had both the ace and queen of spades, it would make no difference which spade East led, since South would make two spade tricks with a successful finesse of his queen. And if South possessed just the ace of spades, then all South would make would be one spade trick.

But if South happened to have the tripleton Q-x-x, then it did matter which spade East led. If he played a low one, South would surely follow suit with a low spade, forcing West to win the trick with the ace (if he didn't the board's ten-spot would capture the trick). Declarer's remaining Q-x would not be promoted into a potentially-winning trick.

Upon analysis, East came up with the play that would take care of South's presumed Q-x-x of spades: at trick two he led the spade jack. South covered this with the queen, and West's ace took the trick. West returned a spade, and dummy's remaining 10-4 was trapped by East's K-9-7. And so the defenders, promptly cashed four spade tricks, to hand declarer a one-trick set.

Japanese Shiatsu Alternative To Acupuncture Treatment

VANCOUVER (CP) — First it was acupuncture, now it's shiatsu.

Acupuncture, the Chinese art of healing through placement of needles at strategic points on the body, has enjoyed wide popularity for some years. Now shiatsu, a Japanese method which promises relief from a long list of complaints, is making a bid for popular acceptance.

Toru Namikoshi, son of the founder of shiatsu, says it can be used to treat migraine headaches, insomnia, hysteria, rheumatism, eyestrain, effects of whiplash, asthma, stomach pains, muscle cramps, constipation and diarrhea.

As well, he claimed, shiatsu can be used to prevent heart disease and even increase sexual potency.

In contrast to acupuncture, which has been used for centuries in China, shiatsu was developed just 40 years ago in Japan by Mr. Namikoshi's father.

Shiatsu translates literally as finger pressure and that's all there is to the technique, said Mr. Namikoshi, in Vancouver recently to spread the word of the healing method.

More clinically, he said shiatsu "relies on the proper application of carefully judged pressures on specific points on the surfaces of the human body to eliminate fatigue and to stimulate the body's self-curative abilities."

But, it isn't just a massage, he added.

USES STEADY PRESSURE

The shiatsu practitioner applies steady pressure, never rubbing, to particular points of the body for several seconds. Most common digit is the thumb, although various combinations of fingers and the palm of the hand are also used.

Mr. Namikoshi said treatment involves more than 400 pressure points, double the number of key points in acupuncture, and generally involves either muscles, nerves, blood vessels or combinations of the three.

Treatment may involve several sessions under the practitioner's thumb.

But Mr. Namikoshi said shiatsu claims no curative powers for contagious diseases or conditions requiring surgery and unlike acupuncture, it can't be used as an anesthetic.

Its major role is simply as preventive medicine, he said.

Mr. Namikoshi is vice-president of the Nippon Shiatsu school in Tokyo, which he said now has 600 students who must take a two-year course, pass government exams and intern for three years before joining Japan's 20,000 shiatsu practitioners.

Billion Dollar Agreement

TOKYO (Reuters) — Iraq and Japan have signed a $1-billion agreement providing for Japanese credits to Iran for economic-development projects in exchange for crude oil and other oil products.

The agreement, signed by Iraqi Economy Minister Himat Al Azzawi and Japanese Foreign Minister Toshio Kimura, provides for Japanese loans totalling $1 billion.

Government sources said the development projects for Iraq are expected to include an oil refinery, a petrochemical plant, cement and fertilizer plants, and an aluminium refinery.

Seatbelts Must for Ont. Police

TORONTO (CP) — Uniformed members of the Ontario Provincial Police have been instructed to use seat belts while driving on duty, commissioner Harold Graham says.

But the directive, issued last month, allows certain exceptions to the "buckle-up" rule.

Policemen will be allowed to use their own discretion in situations where a prisoner is being transported or when approaching the scene of known or suspected danger.

Commissioner Graham said he hoped other citizens would follow the police example.

"It has been proven beyond doubt that the use of seat belts significantly reduces deaths and serious injuries resulting from motor-vehicle collisions," the commissioner said.

"For these reasons we have adopted the use of seat belts as part of our regular operating procedure."

Steel Firms Face Charges

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Four steel companies have been charged in a federal court suit with fraudulently concealing agreements to raise the price of reinforcement materials used in building public facilities.

It named as defendants four firms indicated last week by a federal grand jury on charges of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act. They were Bethlehem Steel Corp. of Bethlehem, Pa.; Laclede Steel Co. of St. Louis, Mo.; Florida Steel Corp. of Tampa and Owen Steel Co. of Jacksonville.

Profit Taken

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average U.S. price of a one-pound loaf of white bread increased to 34.4 cents from 32.8 cents in April, May and June while the farm value of the wheat used for the loaf dropped to 4.5 cents from a record 6.1 cents in the first quarter, the U.S. agriculture department said Tuesday.

The report indicated that bakers and other middlemen have increased their share of the final sales price.

Construction of a $15 million 65-unit senior citizen's rental housing project in Central Saanich will start next week.

General George R. Pearkes will turn the first sod at a ceremony to mark the start of construction, Sunday at 3 p.m.

Sponsored and organized by the South Vancouver Island Zone Housing Society of the Royal Canadian Legion, the housing site is on East Saanich Road between Mount Newton Cross Road and Prosser.

The project is expected to be completed within six months.

The housing program is under the direction of zone housing society chairman Tom Harris.

Legion zone commander

Association, says his organization is preparing a brief for the hearing.

He claims the municipality should refuse such applications until a community plan for Gordon Head, promised by the council, has been made.

He said 225 people attended a meeting, called by council to discuss future growth of the area. Of 175 of those who filled in a questionnaire, Goult said 60 per cent were opposed to townhouses and another 68 per cent said they were not in favor of apartments in their community.

Mayor Ed Lum said the number of people who attended the meeting was small in relation to the total population of Gordon Head.

"Judging by the number of calls this office receives, townhouses will be an acceptable use of the land," Lum added.

He said Saanich's Advisory Planning Commission had endorsed the building of townhouses on the site.

"It's now up to council to decide," Lum said.

Registrations start at 6 p.m. Further information may be obtained by telephoning 478-6784 or 398-5342.

Joe Casey, Ex-Reeve, Dies at Age of 79

Former Saanich reeve Joseph William Casey, 79, died Tuesday.

Casey, who was reeve from 1949 to 1955, was appointed Royal Jubilee's first senator in 1968, an honorary title in recognition of his 15 years of service on the hospital board.

Born in Victoria in 1895 this family, originally named Caissiey, came from Quebec some years before, he attended both Kingston Street and South Park Schools.

After a stint operating garages in the city he joined B.C. Electric in 1917 and remained with the company until his retirement in the late 50s. He was Vancouver Island line superintendent for many years.

Casey's first venture into politics was in 1928 when he ran unsuccessfully for Victoria city council.

He was back, in 1947, this time in Saanich where he had moved the previous year, and elected councillor.

He became reeve in 1949 and ruled with a strong, though not autocratic, hand. His major achievement was getting Saanich a drainage and sewage system.

He dallied with federal politics and in 1957 made an unsuccessful bid for the Soerod nomination.

He was chairman of the Greater Victoria Water Board and Victoria-Saanich parks and beaches committee during the early 50s.

Surviving are his wife Margaret, two sons, Elwood and Raymond, a daughter, Mrs. Viola Barnswell, and five grandchildren, all of Victoria.

He was a member of the Capital City Lodge No. 61, Knights of Pythias, Victoria.

Service will be held at Sands Mortuary Friday, Aug. 23, at 3:30 p.m., Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh officiating.

NDP to Lay Bare Socred 'Bungling'

A complete B.C. Hydro prospectus will be released within two weeks and reveal Social Credit "bungling" of Hydro financing, Premier Barrett said today.

"For the first time everything about Hydro will be known publicly," he said.

"It will reveal the details of where we are at now in terms of the costs we face and what we inherited from the bungling of the Columbia River Treaty."

Barrett said the NDP government has not made "one single error" in Hydro financing but the former Socred administration lost taxpayers $400 million on the Columbia River project.

"Remember the former premier's speech about nothing is freer than free my friends," said Barrett, "that cost us $400 million, that little speech."

Hydro rates in the province are increasing because of the Columbia River "disaster," said Barrett, and not because of any mismanagement on the part of Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs.

The prospectus has been prepared for the New York financial market where Hydro hopes to borrow $100 million this fall for the first stage of construction on the Peace River Site One project.

Barrett's announcement was prompted by a question on recent charges by opposition leader Bill Bennett that the NDP has repeatedly made "million-dollar mistakes" in financing.

"It's time the people of the province began to really understand," said the premier, "and instead of minor little issues examine the fact that major financial bungling was made under the Social Credit administration."

Arab Guerrillas Launch Rampage in Lebanon

United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas protesting the slaying of a guerrilla in a clash with Lebanese police blocked the heart of the ancient port city of Sidon Wednesday with blazing automobile tires and bursts of machine gun fire.

The violent rampage by a dozen guerrillas was stopped an hour after it began by guerrilla police of the Palestinian-Armed Struggle Command, who rushed to the scene and arrested the demonstrators.

Witnesses said the guerrillas fired their weapons in the air, and two small dynamite bombs exploded harmlessly. There were no reports of casualties.

A spokesman for the guerrilla organization Al Fatah said the demonstration in Sidon was "a popular manifestation of anger" over the fatal shooting of an Al Fatah guerrilla late Tuesday at a roadblock on Sidon's southern outskirts manned by Lebanese security forces.

Sidon, about 40 miles north of the Israeli border, has on its southern outskirts Lebanon's biggest Palestinian refugee camp, Ain El Helweh, housing about 20,000 persons. The camp has frequently been attacked by the Israelis from the air and sea.

Hydro Okays Dam Project Near Trail

A spokesman for the B.C. water rights branch said Monday the branch has approved a B.C. Hydro proposal to build a $200-million power development on the Pend D'Oreille River near Trail.

Construction work on the six-year project, which will create an 870-acre reservoir in the West Kootenay, is expected to begin in the fall.

The Pend D'Oreille rises in Idaho and flows 15 miles through B.C. before it joins the Columbia River near the international boundary about 10 miles southeast of Trail.

The site for the project, which includes a 215-foot-high dam and a 700-megawatt power plant, is on the river six miles upstream from the Waneta Dam, owned by Cominco Ltd. which has extensive operations in the area.

Although conservationists and local community groups have expressed concern about the environmental impact of the project, the spokesman for the water rights branch said the branch is satisfied the need for more power has been reasonably established.

Environmental groups stressed that the reservoir, will mean the loss of the last major section of undeveloped, turbulent water in southeastern B.C.

Local communities have indicated they are concerned about the impact of a major construction project on the area.

The spokesman stressed that the licence was granted to Hydro provided a number of conditions were met, "two full pages of them."

Mailed out last week, the four-page decision specified that all submissions made at the public hearings which had to do with social aspects of the development, on "a wider front" than the controller of water rights' own powers, will be considered by Resource Minister Bob Williams.

The access road to the power project, which was of prime concern to environmentalists who protested at the hearings that Hydro's planned route would disrupt a quiet valley, has been left very much at the discretion of the controller, said the spokesman.

"He can move in many directions," he added. Questions of construction sites and work camps has also been left up to the controller for final decision.

The spokesman said flexibility had been built into the licence, which was the outcome of the first public hearings of their kind for a Hydro proposal.

Project Builders Can't Use Valley

B.C. Hydro will not be allowed to truck construction material through the Beaver Valley farming area for its approved Pend D'Oreille River power dam project, the provincial controller of water rights said Tuesday.

Howard Debeck said he will not decide how the construction material should be moved into the site until B.C. Hydro produces a project design for construction.

Location of the access road to the site, 15 miles southeast of Trail, B.C. and close to the United States border, was the most controversial aspect of the project brought out at a four-day public hearing in Trail last month.

Provincial wildlife and Hydro's own environmental consultants had demanded an alternative to a 12.2-mile road that would have sliced through Beaver Valley.

Hydro favored the route because it would have been cheaper to build.

Doug Swanson, spokesman for the Beaver Valley Stop the Road Committee, said he was "elated" by the decision asking Hydro for detailed plans.

"So once the people won something," he said, "Most of us can't believe it."

Hydro now has the choice of deciding whether it favors a route on the north side of the Pend D'Oreille River or one on the south side to carry gravel into the dam site.

Once Hydro's detailed plans are made, Debeck said, they will be submitted to his office for final approval.

The $200-million dam is scheduled to start generating power by October, 1979, and ultimately will produce 3,100 kilowatts hours annually.

The 215-foot-high concrete dam will also produce a 870-acre reservoir on the river, which loops north into Canada for 15 miles and empties into the Columbia River.

CADETS GET PLAQUES FOR BRAVERY

QUEBEC (CP) Five Canadian forces cadets have been awarded plaques for bravery for their actions after a grenade explosion that killed six of their comrades and injured 30 others at the nearby Valcartier military base July 30.

The five, all Quebec province residents, are Cpl. Harold Scott and Cpl. Paul Wheeler, both 16 and of Pointe Claire; Cpl. M. Slater, 17, of Sherbrooke and cadets Daniel Poisson and N. Lussier, both 15, of St. Amable.

The awards were presented at a parade marking the closing of the cadets' six-week training camp. The plaques can be exchanged for medals if the cadets join the regular or reserve forces. It is against the policy of the Canadian forces to award medals to cadets.

Death Squad Strikes

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) Brazil's notorious death squad was reported in action again during the weekend after four bullet-ridden bodies were found in this capital city. The squad is believed to be formed of off-duty policemen who take the law into their own hands against petty criminals. Police said they believe two of the bodies were men who had been killed in a car. They said the wrists had marks of handcuffs and that there were bullet holes in their necks.

Outlaws Massacred By Rivals

PINOTEPA NACIONAL, Mexico (UPI) Eight members of a holdup gang were killed and its leader decapitated and castrated by a rival outlaw group, authorities said Monday.

"It was revenge," said assistant municipal district attorney Manuel Peña.

"They were all riding in the back of a truck used for public transport when they were attacked," Peña said. "The killers made them get out of the truck, lined them up and shot them. The leader of the gang, Faustino Vargas Rodriguez, was decapitated and castrated."

The killings took place Saturday along a dirt road near Pinotepa Nacional about 400 miles southeast of Mexico City. Since no police operate in the mountainous coastal area, the Mexican army has been asked to take charge of the investigation, Peña said.

World-Wide Collapse Feared

TORONTO (CP) — A world-wide collapse with great suffering for the elderly faces society in the next 100 years, says United States sociologist Irving Rosow.

He told a session at the world congress of sociology here Tuesday that if present trends continue, wars, famine and disease will strike world-wide in the next century.

Prof. Rosow, a sociologist at the University of California, said smaller, more rigidly controlled countries would probably emerge from the wreckage.

Technically, these countries would be backward, but the aged would regain some of their traditional authority.

Prof. Rosow said that if world population grows unchecked, it will balloon to 40 billion in 100 years from the current 3.6 billion. However, disease, famine and war would probably contain it to between seven and 20 billion.

A growing use of man-made heat might change climates and create great damage, he said. There would be an economic setback, and a decline in health.

The elderly would suffer particularly, as they would be ill-equipped to compete for survival with the young.

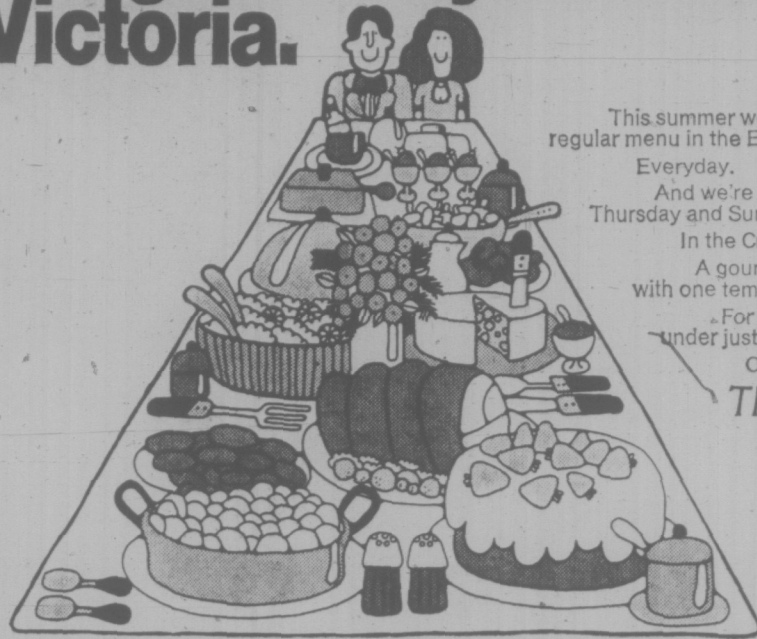

"The life expectancy would decline and fewer people would ever be old," he said.

But after the collapse of the industrialized world, the more traditional society would emerge.

This would bring great benefits to the elderly, as their experience and knowledge would be once more respected.

Commuters in Car Pools Need No Extra Insurance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Commuters who opt to form a car pool won't need additional auto or driver insurance, a spokesman for the Insurance Corporation of B.C. says.

The spokesman said regulations already permit car-pool members to contribute to their driver's expenses without jeopardizing insurance ratings.

He said a special car-pool ruling was made to meet the regulation that a car — other than a taxi — is not covered if it is used to carry passengers for hire or gain.

The spokesman said the driver of any vehicle in class 02 — driven for pleasure and to and from work — can have his expenses paid by a car pool.

He said ICBC favors any scheme that will help reduce traffic congestion on commuter routes.

The city earlier announced plans for a 30-month test run of a project designed to reduce downtown traffic by promoting staggered working hours and computerized car-pooling.

Vancouver's traffic engineering department plans to spend $300,000 of the city's money on the project and has requested an additional $671,000 from the federal government.

Under the proposed scheme, participants will phone city hall and obtain a free computer printout with the names, addresses and working hours of nearby car-owners.

Explorers Plan To Cross Africa On Stanley Trail

LONDON (Reuters) — Explorers from nine countries set off next month to cross Africa via the treacherous Zaire (Congo) River 100 years after American reporter Henry Morton Stanley made the coast-to-coast voyage.

The explorers — soldiers, sailors, airmen, doctors, and scientists, including nine women plan to emulate Stanley's epic 999-day voyage by navigating the whole length of the 2,718-mile river for the first time.

Whereas Stanley's expedition entered the river 600 miles below its source, the new Zaire expedition will tackle the river from its source near Lubumbashi.

The expedition — led by Maj. John Blashford-Snell of the British Army's Royal Engineers — will navigate the Zaire through rapids, swamps and jungle in a specially-constructed giant rubber dinghy — about the length of a bus.

The craft, built in several sections to avoid the danger of puncturing, is steered by two outboard motors but relies mainly on river currents for speed.

Canadian-born Lieut. Mike Rowlett, a British paratrooper, will be in the expedition's vanguard detachment.

end congestion

By DON VEPOND
Times Staff

Veterans' Hospital will become part of neighboring Royal Jubilee Hospital at Sunday midnight and will be known in future as Memorial Pavilion.

Integration ends a decade of debate over the 270-bed hospital for war veterans and pushes the Jubilee complex close to 1,000 beds, easily the second largest hospital in the province and twice the size of Victoria General.

The federal Veterans' Hospital was built for $1 million and opened in 1947. It would cost about $16 million to build today.

In the first phase of integration Jubilee will shift its day care surgery program to Memorial Pavilion, executive director A. C. Pickles said today.

Day care surgery is where patients are admitted and discharged from hospital the same day they undergo surgery. Jubilee operates the biggest such program in the province, doing 4,155 operations last year, about a quarter of its surgery.

At present day care surgery is handled in a "desperately cramped" second floor ward in the main Jubilee block. The move will allow more time for major operations in Jubilee's operating rooms, Pickles said.

The operating rooms at Veterans' have been modernized, part of multi-million dollar renovations at the federal hospital in recent years.

Hospital re-named Memorial Pavilion

Ottawa has been arranging transfer of its hospitals to the provinces across Canada in recent years. Much of the debate surrounding the shift of Veterans' from federal to provincial jurisdiction has concerned guaranteeing continued care for veterans.

Under the agreement concluded earlier this year, entitled veterans are assured priority care at Memorial Pavilion. But the transfer still means close to 100 beds available for community use.

Dr. C. H. Hemmings, director at Veterans' Hospital, will continue as senior treatment medical officer for the department of veterans' affairs and will be in effect the veterans' "ombudsman," Pickles said.

Integration isn't going to happen overnight, he said, and while it starts officially Monday it will take months of work, understanding and co-operation to achieve.

Jubilee's board of directors gave a lot of thought to a new name for the Veterans' Hospital which would both describe its broader role and mark its historical significance.

The choice of Memorial Pavilion has been endorsed by Pacific Command of the Royal Canadian Legion, he said.

The addition brings total beds at Jubilee, which also operates the Eric Martin Institute for psychiatric care, to about 985 and they cover just about every kind of hospital care.

Beds at Veterans' handle acute care, extended care, intermediate care and personal care patients while EMI has 100 beds for adult psychiatric cases, a 10-bed unit for children and 62 beds for extended care of severely disabled children.

Finlayson Controversy Nearing End

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria will soon write the last chapter in the long-running saga of Finlayson Street, which at times resembled a soap opera complete with angry confrontations across street barricades and undeleted expletives.

The basic questions were whether Finlayson between Cook and Quadra should be left in its present, accident-prone state, widened to permit safer passage of traffic or closed to traffic entirely.

After heated public opinion brought a hasty end to the city's closure experiment last April, council settled for the compromise of widening the street by two feet on either side.

Council affirmed that policy Tuesday by approving cost estimates totalling $221,850 which cover not only the widening project ($165,850) but also $28,000 for the Cook-Finlayson intersection and another $28,000 for the route extension from Cedar Hill to Doncaster.

The Cedar Hill-Doncaster stretch lies in Saanich but if that municipality agrees to the work going ahead, the city is prepared to foot the bill.

City manager Jim Bramley told council that ultimately Saanich might decide to extend the route through to Shelbourne, in accordance with a 10-year plan which designated Finlayson-North Dairy as an east-west cross-town route.

In that case, he said, Saanich would meet the most out of its own road budget.

The part of the route between Cook and Cedar Hill, providing four lanes of traffic, has been completed for nearly a year but closed while the controversy continued.

The widening between Cook and Quadra involves construction of two 11-foot travelling lanes and one eight-foot parking lane.

One of the biggest cost items will be the relocation of Hydro poles on both sides of the street. The mature trees on the boulevard will not be affected.

City engineer Jim Garnett said today the widening will not be tackled until the Cook-Finlayson intersection has been prepared and the Saanich stretch between Cedar Hill and Doncaster completed.

Rescue Attempt Broken Affair

A two car, head-on collision in View Royal early this morning sent five people to hospital, including a woman who heard the crash and tripped and broke her leg as she ran for help.

Colwood RCMP said Iris O'Connor was in her apartment at 106, 342 Island Highway, when she heard the crash at Old Island Highway and Prince Robert shortly before 1 a.m., she ran outside, fell and broke her leg in two places.

She was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital along with Brian Megaw, 25, of Edmonton, driver of one of the cars. She is in good condition. Megaw was treated and released.

Police are withholding the name of the driver of the second car, but he and a passenger, Hedley Newton, 19, of CFB Esquimalt, were taken to Victoria General with more serious injuries. They are in fair condition in the intensive care ward.

Carol Clifford, 21, of Knotty Pine Road, a passenger in the Megaw vehicle, was admitted to Victoria General also with undetermined injuries. She is listed in good condition.

It's Double Security At Lottery Office

Running the B.C. lottery has the security overtones of a general election with ticket stubs taking the place of ballots.

Lotteries branch staff who moved into new permanent headquarters Thursday have sent one batch of 91,081 stubs back to Western Canada Lottery head office in Winnipeg, and are about to dispatch about that many more employing a double security system.

Each ticket stub is torn in half by staff working under lotteries branch director John Stewart, who estimates 12 million tickets have been sold in B.C. for the first draw Oct. 23.

Half of each stub is placed in a steel box, locked up and shipped to Manitoba, while the other half is placed in a sealed bag and airtight in the prairie capital.

When the two shipments are received in Winnipeg they are matched by computer before the drawing.

A lottery spokesman said the method provides reasonable assurance of at least one shipment getting to Winnipeg even if the other is burned up or lost in disaster.

Although only about 200,000 ticket sales are confirmed by the actual stubs returned to Victoria lottery branch, there are nearly two million tickets in distribution and another 500,000 yet to be distributed.

Value of the known sales is $500,000.

A sales push by the 530 licensed agencies is expected during the next six weeks. Stubs must be returned to agencies by Oct. 7 for processing and return to Winnipeg.

Ticket holders face long odds for the $250,000 top prize — one in five million expected to be sold between the four western provinces.

An acupuncture clinic will be operating in Victoria early this fall, Health Minister Dennis Cocke confirmed today.

The minister would not say where the clinic would be located but it will likely be operated out of one of the two major hospitals.

A clinic will also soon be set up at Vancouver General Hospital, he said, but other outlets across the province will not be started immediately.

"Naturally, we have to find capable people to work in these institutions but at least they're off the ground," said Cocke.

All the new clinics will be under strict supervision of the B.C. Medical profession, Cocke said.

The Vancouver acupuncture committee, made up of doctors and members of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, has been working on developing standards for acupuncture treatment for over a year.

"We have a number of people that have not only been to China but have been studying acupuncture locally and have some pretty good ideas," said Cocke.

"I mean they're not the world's leading acupuncturists but... they're highly competent."

The committee is working in the final details of the clinics and those will be announced shortly, he said.

Cocke will be travelling to China with Premier Barrett this fall and will take the opportunity to study acupuncture on a first-hand basis.

Check Clears Marguerite

A special investigation by the ministry of transport has given the Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite a clean bill of health.

The checks which took place Monday and Tuesday on the ship's runs between Victoria and Seattle, were ordered after Aid. Fred Severns of Saanich said the ship was loaded she was like "a cattle car" the last time he was aboard.

Area marine surveyor Bob Baird said today his assistant was "quite happy" with the number of passengers being carried on the Marguerite, which is licensed to carry 2,000 passengers and a 90-man crew.

"He found the maximum passengers ever carried was 1,845," Baird said, "and the average is around 500."

Baird said his department was satisfied that safety equipment and facilities aboard the ship fully justified her licence for 2,000.

Q: I would like to know when the last bridge was built over "Gorge Water," called Point Ellice bridge. —J.M.

A: The present Point Ellice bridge was opened Nov. 30, 1937, after almost six months of construction. It cost $683,000. The bridge site has a long, and on one occasion, tragic history. A rough wooden bridge was thrown across the water at that point in the 1800s. It was replaced in 1885 by a bridge which was to produce Victoria's greatest tragedy. It collapsed under the weight of a crowded streetcar on the May 24 weekend in 1896. Fifty-five people died. That bridge was replaced in 1901, to carry traffic until the present structure opened 15 years ago.

Dolphins May Splash In Old Crystal Pool

Dolphins may splash and gambol where humans once wallowed somewhat less gracefully if Victoria city council accepts a consortium's proposal for restoring the old Crystal Garden building as a marine aquarium.

Representatives of the group received some encouraging comments from individual aldermen after making their presentation to council's caucus meeting Tuesday.

But the only commitment given was that the submission would be studied by council's special Crystal Garden committee, along with any other proposals coming from other developers.

Meanwhile, the group on the project's feasibility and present a more comprehensive proposal to the city within four months.

Terry Smith, vice-president of Penthouse Developments, said the intention was to seek a long-term lease on the property, prompting Ald. Tom Christie to warn that the deal wouldn't "come cheap."

Smith said actual restoration costs could amount to $1 million, and the total cost of the project could exceed $2 million.

Plans were to raise the level of the disused swimming pool some four feet with plexiglass walls, so that the dolphins could be viewed underwater as well as from the surface, and similar viewing opportunities would be provided in other pools and tanks.

Other attractions in the complex would include a public space featuring shopping areas, an arboretum, tropical aviary and "water garden," as well as a seafood restaurant and specialty food shops.

Ald. Sam Bawlf, who earlier suggested the city undertake restoration itself and then consider operation of an arboretum by the commercial sector, was the only member of council openly opposed to the consortium's plans.

He said the group should be asked to show whether there would be an adequate market for their attraction, as he had serious doubts whether Victoria could support three marine complexes.

Mayor Peter Pollen disagreed on the need for such a study, saying the city at present has only "one and a half Sealands" both owned by the same man, and perhaps a little competition would be healthy.

CURLY CARL YOUNGEST AND THE BEST

Carl Buchan, 17, member of the sailing Buchans of Seattle, is far ahead in the 10-race series which will decide this year's North America single-handed champion.

He was 23.7 points ahead of second-place holder, Don Trask of San Francisco as the third day of racing began off Esquimalt today.

The youngest sailor in the international event, Buchan, if he continues to hold his position, will pull off his second international championship within weeks.

He beat out 116 other racers at Jericho Sailing Centre on the mainland July 28 to win the Canadian Laser championship. He will be competing in the world Laser championships in Bermuda this fall.

Trask placed second at Jericho, also qualifying to race in the Laser world.

Buchan is the son of Swiftsure veteran Bill Buchan, who is alternate helmsman and tactician aboard the 12-metre Intrepid, now cleaning up at pre-America's Cup trials at Newport, Rhode Island.

Rick Kern of Sherman Oaks, Calif., was in third position as racing began today while the only Canadian in the event, Tony Rose of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club was in 10th spot.

Standings, on completion of the first five races, using the minimal point Olympic scoring system, were:

ICBC Getting Stiff Fight

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The private insurance industry in B.C. appears to be giving the government-owned insurance corporation a run for its money.

Four of the industry leaders among 160 general insurance firms report sales up at least 15 per cent so far this year, and one looks to a possible 25 per cent improvement by the end of 1974.

One of the four, Wawanesa Mutual, reports a staggering 65-70 per cent jump in premium sales value since January, while the Vancouver Insurance Co. of Canada says personal property insurance sales — one sector of the general insurance field — are up 60 per cent for the 12 months to June 30.

Their performance raises the question of whether the Insurance Corp. of B.C. can live up to its prediction in April that in the coming year it would have "premium volume in the general insurance business greater than any of its competitors in B.C."

ICBC maintains it has no wish to force the private insurers out of the general indemnity field and will not resort to undercutting rates to obtain a larger share of the market.

A spokesman for the Crown agency said "We believe we are competitive — we don't intend to run a cut-rate operation."

At the same time, he said, ICBC believes itself to be among the top five of general insurers in the province and "growing at about the rate we expected and on track with the general insurance line."

There are no statistics available to make an accurate comparison.

ICBC made its first financial report in April, coinciding with the start of the government's fiscal year, and based on operations commencing six months earlier.

In the private insurance sector reports based on the calendar year are made annually to the superintendent of insurance for B.C. There is no statistical function within the industry association represented by the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

Private insurers attribute the rise in business to several factors, among them:

Departure of some insurance companies from B.C. following ICBC takeover of automobile insurance which had accounted for two-thirds of the total indemnity field.

Inflation in the real estate industry making for higher revaluations for current policies and renewals.

Inflation in the construction industry causing higher settlements on claims for property losses.

Steadily climbing insurance rates to cover generally higher operating costs.

To illustrate the third point, see INSURANCE, Page 2.

FLEEING ROBBER SHOOTS PURSUER

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — A young gunman shot and seriously wounded a pursuer after robbing a Vancouver variety store Tuesday, and escaped by hijacking a mobile camper at gunpoint.

The violence unfolded in front of pedestrians and motorists along the busy 100 block of East Broadway when the blonde-haired holdup man tried to make his getaway.

Raymond Reid, 33 of Vancouver, was shot once in the abdomen at close range as he closed in on the gunman outside a stationery store.

Woolworth's security movie camera was trained on the cash register, only 15 feet from the holdup man, when the robbery took place.

Reid, who owns a florist shop less than a block from where he was shot, was reported in fair condition Tuesday night following surgery at Vancouver General Hospital.

The drama began when a man in his mid-20s walked into the F. W. Woolworth store at 2409 Main, dumped a mirror out of a cardboard box and ordered cashier Debbie Fenz to fill the box with money.

With a long-barrelled revolver pointed at her, she gave him about $200 from the register and a stack of larger bills kept under the tray.

The man then ran south on Main with Reid in pursuit, turned west on Broadway, literally running into John Walden and his two sons from Prince Rupert.

"The boys got tangled up in the chase," said Walden, a 44-year-old apartment-building landlord visiting relatives in the city.

"The next thing I knew, the tall fellow took out a revolver and shot the other guy in the stomach. Everybody was just standing around flabbergasted."

After shooting Reid, the gunman commandeered the camper, forcing the driver to chauffeur him through the downtown traffic.

Several blocks after the drive began, the gunman jumped from the camper and disappeared down a side street.

Team Facing Ban For Ferry Party

At least one member of an amateur lacrosse team from Nanaimo may be prosecuted and the entire team banned from using B.C. ferries after a rowdy party aboard the Queen of Burnaby.

The incident occurred Friday when two busloads of fans and the Nanaimo Lacrosse team were returning to Nanaimo after the team had lost 9-7 to the New Westminster Rebels in its last game of the season.

Team manager Dave Weighill said the 25 members and some fans decided to "whoop it up." There was a lot of noise, beer was spilled. Some of the merry-makers decided to have a water fight with fire extinguishers.

"If it can be proven that fire extinguishers were used," David Erice, ferry official, said today, "We will not hesitate to take action."

"That is a federal offence. We would prosecute the individuals involved and we would not hesitate to ban the team from using the ferry service."

Price said the RCMP had been called to investigate a "wild party" when an Esquimalt team was travelling aboard the Queen of Esquimalt Aug. 11 and a Victoria team had been banned "two or three years ago."

Contacted in Nanaimo, Weighill confirmed that fire extinguishers had been used. He said he had taken one away from one of the team members but wasn't able to get another extinguisher being used by another merry-maker.

Price said Weighill had taken up a collection aboard the ferry, giving the money to a steward to clean up the mess after the regular cleaning woman had refused.

Departure Bay terminal manager expressed sympathy for Weighill.

Bad Inning Beats City Youngsters

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — One bad inning knocked the Esquimalt-Victoria West team out of title contention 1 day in the eight-team Little League baseball world series.

Red Bluff, Calif., representing the U.S. west zone, scored three times in the fifth inning on two hits and two errors and went on to defeat the Canadian champions 3-0 in a first-round game.

Red Bluff's 250-pound pitcher, 12-year-old righthander Mark Calucci, started the uprisings with a one-out single off the centrefield fence and moved to second as Dale Gilbert was safe on an error by second baseman Mike Bitten.

Both runners moved up on a wild pitch and Calucci scored when Victoria catcher Guyle Cornett missed a tag.

Two more runs scored on a double by Jim Sharpe before Victoria pitcher Mike Bull ended the inning by striking out the next two batters.

Bull allowed five hits and struck out nine batters.

Bellamy saw the new act, along with the existing human rights legislation, for the first time this week.

Human Rights director Kathleen Ruff, who has been approaching operators around the province asking them to change their job ads, met with Bellamy to discuss sexual discrimination in hiring.

She pointed out that discrimination in hiring has been illegal since 1969 but the new code fills a loophole which allowed employers to hire on the basis of sex.

PLANE CRASHES AT AIRPORT

A twin engine Beechcraft plane crashlanded on a runway at Victoria International Airport at 11:30 a.m. today.

An RCMP spokesman said two people, a man and a woman, were aboard but neither was injured in the mishap which occurred in the centre of the field opposite the control tower.

An eyewitness said the plane, privately owned and registered in the United States, was unable to get its wheels down and landed on its undercarriage. No estimate of the damage is available.

NDP Plans To Push Its Image

The NDP government is planning a campaign to boost its image and begin "selling" itself to the people of B.C.

"We're going to do a better job of preparing and selling what we are doing," Premier Dave Barrett said this morning.

"We've been busy really doing things that we haven't beat the drum."

A fence-mending tour of the province this fall is first on Barrett's agenda and he said other ministers also will be out visiting the hustings.

The idea of a new public image campaign came out of a two-day "think-tank" session at Mesachie Lake this week at which cabinet assessed its track record over the last two years.

Barrett denied all the ministers had given themselves "A" on their ministerial report cards but said the cabinet is proud of its record and has no disappointments.

"If anything, I accused the ministers of being modest about their accomplishments."

When you examine the accomplishments, you have to ask any opposition member exactly what policy it is that they are against. Because if you go through it point by point, they won't dare change any of the things we've done."

HAMILTON

He Just Won't File

Central Saanich Ald. Zach Hamilton has "no intention whatsoever" of listing his assets as required under the new B.C. Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act.

Hamilton said today he was aware he would not be able to run for public office again unless he filled out the papers, "but I couldn't care less," he said.

"I have no intention whatsoever of filling papers for every Tom, Dick and Harry to see as they like."

Hamilton is the first alderman in the Greater Victoria area to declare a firm intention not to file the papers.

Under the new act, elected officials and some senior employees must list all financial assets and companies in which they have an interest. The deadline for filing the papers is Sept. 15.

An official who does not file the required papers is allowed to finish his term of office, but may not run again.

Hamilton's term of office will expire this November.

He said he has nothing against the intent of the act, and would agree to file the papers if they were to be lodged with the attorney-general and anyone wishing to see them had to fill out a form stating why he wanted to see them.

Hamilton said the initiators of the act were "naïve if they think they can legislate honestly."

"I own certain things and it's my own business."

He said one of the questions on the government form asked him to list all corporations in which he owned more than one share.

"I have a good portfolio of speculative mining stocks and if they think I'm going to list that, then they've got another thing coming."

HOLDUP GANGLAND STYLE

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — An armored car guard was shot in the head today as four heavily armed bandits got away with about $200,000 in a gangland style holdup.

Roadblocks were set up throughout northwestern Quebec after the four left this community, 100 miles east of Kirkland Lake, firing a hail of bullets.

Police identified the guard as Adolph Potvin of Timmins. The bullet entered his head over the right eye and he had showed no signs of regaining consciousness.

"He is only mechanically living," said police chief Alain Grenier. "I think he'll die any minute."

The guard was shot as he stepped out of the Brinks armored vehicle—which was carrying a $200,000 currency shipment to the Royal Bank of Canada branch on the main street.

Police said all roads leading out of this community have been sealed off. The robbers made their getaway in a yellow truck with Quebec licence plates.

Police said the robbers were armed with machine guns as well as small-calibre rifles.

WELFARE CHEAT TO PAY DOUBLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge Tuesday warned welfare cheaters that they will be charged on a "two for one" basis if they are convicted in his court.

"For each dollar defrauded it is going to cost the accused persons two dollars," said Judge Les Bewley.

Judge Bewley delivered the warning before sentencing Andre Lemaire, 49, who was convicted of defrauding the social assistance department of $1,260.

In line with the judge's new formula, Lemaire was fined $1,260 and ordered to pay back another $1,260 to the social assistance department.

The court was told Lemaire admitted to detective Lorne Nalley he was gainfully employed and not entitled to the $1,260 in welfare money he received from January to May this year.
